DRUMMER; OR, THE HAUNTED HOUSE. A MEDY C OAs it is Acted at the Theatre-Royal in Drury-Lane, B Y His MAJESTY's Servants. Addison -Falsis terroribus implet Ut Magus____ Hor. The SECOND EDITION. 148169 LONDON: Printed for Jacob Tonson at Shakespear's-Head, over-against Katharine-Street in the Strand. MDCCXVI.

THE PREFACE.

Having recommended this Play to the Town, and delivered the Copy of it to the Bookfeller, I think my felf oblig'd to give fome Account of it.

It had been fome Years in the Hands of the Author. and falling under my Perusal, I thought so well of it that I perfuaded him to make a few Additions and Alterations to it, and let it appear upon the Stage. I own I was very highly pleafed with it, and lik'd it the better, for the want of those studyed Similes and Repartees, which we, who have writ before him, have thrown into our Plays, to indulge and gain upon a falle Tafte that has prevailed for many Years in the British Theatre. I believe the Author would have fallen into this Way a little more than he has, had he, before the writing of it, been often prefent at Theatrical Representations, and observ'd the Effect that such Ornaments generally have upon the Town. I was confirmed in my Thoughts of the Play, by the Opinion of better Judges to whom it was Communicated, who observed that the Scenes were written very much. after Moliere's Manner, and that an easte and natural Vein of Humour ran through the whole.

I do not question but the Reader will discover this, and see many Beauties that escape the Audience; the Touches being too delicate for every Taste in a Popular Affembly. My Brother-Sharers were of Opinion, at the first reading of it, that it was like a Picture in which the Strokes were not strong enough to appear with Advantage at a Distance. As it is not in the common way of Writing, the Approbation was at first Doubtful, but has risen every time it has been Acted, and has given an Opportunity in several of its Parts for as just and good Action as I ever faw on the Stage.

N L L A L L

The Reader will confider that I speak here as the Patentee, for which Reason I forbear being more particular in the Character of this Play, least I should appear like one, who cries up the Wares of his own Shop to draw in Customers.

Richard Steele.

PRO-

Spoken by Mr. Wilks.

N this Grave Age, when Comedies are few, We crave your Patronage for one that's New; Tho'twere poor Stuff, yet bid the Author fair, And let the Scarcene's recommend the Ware. Long have your Ears been fill'd with Tragick Parts, Blood and Blank-Verse have harden'd all your Hearts; If e'er you smile, 'tis at some Party Stroaks, Round-heads and Wooden-shooes are standing Jokes; The same Conceit gives Claps and Hisses Birth, You're grown such Politicians in your Mirth! For once we try (tho' 'tis, Iown, unsafe) To please you All, and make both Parties laugh:

Our Author, anxious for his Fame to Night, And bashful in his First Attempt to write. Lies cautionsly obscure and unreveal'd, Like Ancient Actors in a Masque conceal^ed. Censure, when no Man knows who writes the Play. Were much good Malice merely thrown away. The mighty Criticks will not blaft, for Shame, A raw young Thing, who dares not tell his Name: Good-natur'd Judges will th' unknown defend, And fear to blame, least they shou'd burt a Friend : Each Wit may praise it, for his own dear Sake, And hint He writ it, if the Thing shou'd take. But, if you're rough, and use him like a Dog. Depend upon it — He'll remain Incog. If you shou'd hiss, he swears He'll hiss as high, And, like a Culprit, joyn the Hue-and-Cry.

If Cruel Men are still averse to spare These Scenes, they fly for Resuge to the Fair. Tho' with a Ghost our Comedy be heighten'd, Ladies upon my Word you shan't be frighten'd; O, 'tis a Ghost that scorns to be uncivil, A well-spread, lusty, Jointure-hunting Devil; An Am'rous Ghost, that's faithful, fond and true, Made up of Flesh and Blood — as much as you. Then every Evening come in Flocks, undaunted; We never think this House is too much Haunted.

THE

HAUNTED-HOUSE.

ACT I. SCENE I.

A Great Hall.

Enter the Butler, Coachman, and Gardiner.

But. THERE came another Coach to Town laft Night, that brought a Gentleman to enquire about this ftrange Noife, we hear in the Houfe. This Spirit will bring a power of Cuftom to the George — If fo be he continues his Pranks, I defign to fell a Pot of Ale, and fet up the Sign of the Drum.

Coach. I'll give Madam warning, that's flat —— I've always liv'd in Sober Families. I'll not difparage my felf to be a Servant in a Houfe that is haunted.

Gard. I'll e'en marry Nell, and rent a bit of Ground of my own, if both of you leave Madam; not but that Madam's a very good Woman—if Mrs. Abigal did not fpoil her—come, here's her Health.

But. It's a very hard thing to be a Butler in a House, that is disturb'd. He made such a Racket in the Cellar last Night, that I'm asraid he'll sower all the Beer in my Barrels.

B

Coash.

Coach. Why then, John, we ought to take it off as fast as we can. Here's to you—He rattled fo loud under the Tiles last Night, that I verily thought the House wou'd have fallen over our Heads. I durst not go up into the Cock-Lost this Morning, if I had not got one of the Maids to go along with me.

LI WIIIIII , UI,

Gard. I thought I heard him in one of my Bed-Pofts —____I marvel, John, how he gets into the Houfe when all the Gates are fhut.

But. Why look ye Peter, your Spirit will creep you into an Augre-Hole: — he'll whisk ye through a Key-Hole, without fo much as juftling against one of the Wards.

Coach. Poor Madam is mainly frighted that's certain, and verily believes 'tis my Mafter that was kill'd in the laft Campaign.

But. Out of all manner of Queftion, Robin, 'tis Sir George.' Mrs. Abigal is of Opinion it can be none but his Honour; he always lov'd the Wars, and you know was mightily pleas'd from a Child with the Mufick of a Drum.

Gard. I wonder his Body was never found after the Battle.

But. Found! Why, ye Fool, is not his Body here about the Houfe? Doft thou think he can beat his Drum without Hands and Arms?

Coach. 'Tis Mafter as fure as I ftand here alive, and I verily believe I faw him laft Night in the Town-Clofe.

Gard. Ay! how did he appear?

Coach. Like a White-Horfe.

But. Pho, Robin, I tell ye he has never appear'd yet but in the Shape of the Sound of a Drum, Ceach. This makes one almost afraid of one's own Shadow. As I was walking from the Stable t'other Night without my Lanthorn, I fell a-crofs a Beam, that lay in my way, and Faith my Heart was in my Mouth—I thought I had stumbled over a Spirit.

But. Thou might's as well have flumbled over a Straw; why, a Spirit is fuch a little little Thing, that I have heard a Man, who was a great Scholar, fay, that he'll dance ye a Lancashire Horn-Pipe upon the point of a Needle—As I fat in the Pantry last Night counting my Spoons, the Candle methought burnt blue, and the fpay'd Bitch look'd as if the faw fomething.

Coach. Ay poor Cur, fhe's almost frighten'd out of her Wits. Gard. Ay I warrant ye, fhe hears him many a time and often when we don't. But,

The Hauntea House.

But. My Lady must have him Laid, that's certain, whatever it cost her.

Gard. I fancy, when one goes to Market, one might hear of fome body that can make a Spell.

Coach. Why may not the Parlon of our Parish lay him?

But. No, no, nc, our Parfon cannot lay him.

Coach. Why not he as well as another Man?

But. Why, ye Fool, he is not qualified —— He has not taken the Oaths.

Gard. Why, d'ye think John, that the Spirit wou'd take the Law of him?—faith, I cou'd tell you one way to drive him off.

Coach. How's that?

Gard. I'll tell you immediately [drinks] I fancy Mrs. Abigal might Scold him out of the House.

Conch. Ay, fhe has a Tongue that would drown his Drum, if any thing cou'd.

But. Pugh, this is all froth! you underftand nothing of the Matter — the next time it makes a Noife, I tell you what ought to be done, — I wou'd have the Steward fpeak Latin to it.

Coach. Ay that wou'd do, if the Steward had but Courage.

Gard. There you have it ——He's a fearful Man. If I had as much Learning as he, and I met the Ghoft, I'd tell him his own! but alack what can one of us poor Men do with a Spirit, that can neither Write nor Read?

But. Thou art always cracking and boafting, Peter, thou doft not know what Mifchief it might do thee, if fuch a filly Dog as thee fhould offer to fpeak to it. For ought I know, he might flea thee alive, and make Parchment of thy Skin to cover his Drum with.

Gard. A Fidleftick! tell not me — I fear nothing; not I! I never did harm in my Life, I never committed Murder.

But. I verily believe thee, keep thy Temper, Peter; after Supper we'll drink each of us a double Mug, and then let come what will boot

Gard. Why that's well faid John, an honeft Man that is not quite fober, has nothing to fear — Here's to yc— why how if he fhou'd come this Minute, here wou'd I ftand. Ha! what Noife is that?

But. & Coach. Ha! where?

Gard. The Devil! the Devil! Oh no, 'tis Mrs. Abigal.

B 2

But.

The Drummer; Or,

But. Ay faith!'tis she; 'tis Mrs. Abigal! a good Mistake! 'tis Mrs. Abigal.

Enter Abigal.

Ab. Here are your drunken Sots for youl Is this a time to be guzling, when Gentry are come to the Houfe! why don't You lay your Cloth? How come You out of the Stables? Why are not You at work in your Garden?

Gard. Why, youder's the fine Londoner and Madam fetching a walk together, and me-thought they look'd as if they should fay they had rather have my Room than my Company.

But. And to forfooth being all three met together, we are doing our Endeavours to drink this fame Drummer out of our Heads.

Gard. For you must know, Mrs. Abigal, we are all of Opinion that one can't be a Match for him, unless one be as Drunk as a Drum.

Coach. I am refolved to give Madam Warning to hire herfelf another Coachman, for I came to ferve my Mafter, d'ye fee, while he was alive, but do fuppofe that he has no further occasion for a Coach, now he Walks.

Bat. Truly, Mrs. Abigal, I must needs fay, that this fame Spirit is a very odd fort of a Body, after all, to fright Madam and his old Servants at this rate.

Gard. And truly, Mis. Abigal, I must needs fay, I ferv'd my my Master contentedly, while he was living; but I will ferve no Man living (that is, no Man that is not living) without double Wages.

Ab. Ay, 'tis fuch Cowards as you that go about with Idle Stories, to difgrace the Houfe, and bring fo many Strangers about it; you first frighten your felves, and then your Neighbours.

Gard. Frighten'd ! I fcorn your Words. Frighten'd quoth a ! Ab. What you Sot ! are you grown Por-valiant?

Gard. Frighten'd with a Drum! that's a good one! it will do us no harm, 1'll anfwer for it. It will bring no Blood-fhed along with it, take my Word. It founds as like a Train-Band Drum as ever I heard in my Life.

But. Prithee, Peter, don't be so presumptuous.

Ab. Well, these drunken Rogues take it as I cou'd with. [Afide. Gard. I forn to be frightned, now lam in for't; if old Dub-adub shou'd come into the Room, I wou'd take him ______ But. Prithee hold thy Tongue. Gard.

I DE LAMMICA LIVAJE.

Gard. I would take him - [The Drum heats, the Gard. endeavours to get off, and falls.

But. & Coach. Speak to it, Mrs. Abigal.

Gard. Spare my Life, and take all I have.

Coach. Make off, make off, good Butler, and let us go hide our felves in the Cellar. [They all run off.

Abigal Sola.

Ab. So, now the Coast is clear, I may venture to call out my Drummer. — But first let me shut the Door, lest we be furpriz'd. Mr. Fantome, Mr. Fantome! [He beats.] Nay, nay, pray come out, the Enemy's fled — I must speak with you immediately — don't stay to beat a Parley.

[The back Scene opens and discovers Fantome with a Drum. Fan. Dear Mrs. Nabby, I have overheard all that has been faid, and find thou haft manag'd this thing fo well, that I cou'd take thee in my Arms, and kifs thee —— if my Drum did not fland in my way.

Ab. Well, O'my Confeience, you are the merrieft Ghoft ! and the very Picture of Sir George Truman.

Fan. There you flatter me, Mrs. Abigal; Sir George had that freshnels in his Looks, that we Men of the Town cannot come up to.

Ab. Oh! Death may have alter'd you, you know — befides, you must confider, you lost a great deal of Blood in the Battle.

Fan. Ay, that's right; let me look never fo pale, this Cut crofs my Forehead will keep me in Countenance:

Ab. 'Tis just fuch a one as my Master receiv'd from a cursec' French Trooper, as my Lady's Letter inform'd her.

Fan. It happens luckily that this Suit of Cloaths of Su George's fits me fo well, --- I think I can't fail hitting the Air o, a Man with whom I was fo long acquainted.

Ab. You are the very Man ---- I vow I almost start when I look upon you.

Fan. But what good will this do me, if I must remain in visible?

Ab. Pray what good did your being visible do you? the fai Mr. Fantome thought no Woman cou'd withfland him — But whe you were seen by my Lady in your proper Person, after she ha taken a full furvey of you, and heard all the pretty things yo cou'd fay, she very civilly dismiss'd you for the sake of this empty noify Creature Tinsel. She fancies you have been gone from hence this Fortnight.

2100 DI WIIIII 9. 01 9.

Fan. Why really I love thy Lady fo well, that tho' I had no hopes of gaining her for my felf, I cou'd not bear to fee her given to another, cfpecially to fuch a Wretch as Tinfel.

Ab. Well, tell me truly Mr. Fantome, have not you a great Opinion of my Fidelity to my dear Lady, that I wou'd not fuffer her to be deluded in this manner, for lefs than a Thousand Pound?

Fan. Thou art always reminding me of my Promife— thou fhalt have it, if thou canft bring our Project to bear; do'ft not know that Stories of Ghofts and Apparitions generally end in a Pot of Money?

Ab. Why, truly now Mr. Fantome, I shou'd think my felf a very bad Woman, if I had done what I do, for a Farthing lefs.

Fan. Dear Abigal, how I admire thy Virtue!

Ab. No, no, Mr. Fantome, I defy the worft of my Enemies to fay I love Milchief for Milchief fake.

Fan. But is thy Lady perfwaded that I am the Ghoft of her deceafed Husband?

Ab. I endeavour to make her believe fo, and tell her every time your Drum rattles, that her Husband is chiding her for entertaining this new Lover.

Fan. Prithee make use of all thy Art, for I am tir'd to Death with strowling round this wide Old House, like a Rat behind a Wainfcot.

Ab. Did not I tell you, 'twas the purest place in the World for you to play your Tricks in; there's none of the Family that knows every Hole and Corner in it, befides my felf.

Fan. Ah Mrs. Abigal! You have had your Intrigues.

Ab. For you must know when I was a romping young Girl I was a mighty lover of Hide and Seek.

Fan. I believe, by this Time, I am as well acquainted with the Houfe as your felf.

Ab. You are very much miftaken, Mr. Fantome; but no matter for that; here is to be your Station to Night. This is the Place unknown to any one living befides my felf, fince the Death of the Joyner; who, you must understand, being a Lover of mine, contriv'd the Wainfcot to move to and fro, in the manner that you find it. I defign'd it for a Wardrobe for my Lady's cast Cloaths.

The Haunted House.

Cloaths. Oh! the Stomachers, Stays, Pettycoats, Commodes, lac'd Shooes, and good things that I have had in it! — pray take care you don't break the Cherry-Brandy Bottle, that ftands up in the Corner.

Fan. Well Mrs. Abigal, J hire your Clofet of you, but for this one Night—a thousand Pound you know is a very good Rent.

Ab. Well, get you gone; you have fuch a way with you there's no denying you any thing!

Fan. I'm a thinking how Tinfel will ftare, when he fees me come out of the Wall: for I am refolved to make my Appearance to Night.

Ab. Get you in, get you in, my Lady's at the Door.

Fan. Pray take care fhe does not keep me up fo late, as fhe did laft Night; or depend upon it I'll beat the Tattoo.

Ab. I'm undone, I'm undone [As he is going in] Mr. Fantome, Mr. Fantome, you have put the thousand Pound Bond into my Brother's Hands.

Fan. Thou shalt have it, I tell thee, thou shalt have it.

Fantome goes in.

Ab. No more Words Vanish, Vanish.

Enter Lady.

Ab. [opening the Door] Oh, dear Madam, was it you that made fuch a knocking? my Heart does fo beat — I vow you have frighted me to Death — I thought verily it had been the Drummer.

Lady. I have been showing the Garden to Mr. Tinfel; he's most infufferably witty upon us about this Story of the Drum.

Ab. Indeed, Madam, he's a very loofe Man! I'm afraid'tis he that hinders my poor Mafter from refting in his Grave.

Lady. Well! an Infidel is fuch a Novelty in the Country, that I am refolv'd to divert my felf a Day or two at leaft with the Oddnefs of his Conversation.

Ab. Ah, Madam! the Drum begun to beat in the Houfe as foon as ever this Creature was admitted to vifit you. All the while Mr. Fantome made his Addreffes to you, there was not a Moufe ftirring in the Family more than us'd to be—

Lady. This Baggage has fome Defign upon me, more than I can yet difcover. [afide] — Mr. Fantome was always thy Favourite.

Ab. Ay, and shou'd have been yours too, by my Consent! Mr. Fantome

The Drummer; Ur,

Fantome was not fuch a flight fantastick thing as this is. — Mr. Fantome was the best-built Man one shou'd see in a Summer's Day! Mr. Fantome was a Man of Honour, and lov'd you! Poor Soul! how has he sigh'd when he has talk'd to me of my hardhearted Lady — Well! I had as lief as a thousand Pound, you wou'd marry Mr. Fantome!

Lady. To tell thee truly, I lov'd him well enough till I found he lov'd me fo much. But Mr. Tinfel makes his Court to me with fo much Neglect and Indifference, and with fuch an agreeable Saucinefs—Not that I fay I'll marry him.

Ab. Marry him, quoth-a! no, if you fhould, you'll be awaken'd fooner than married Couples generally are — You'll quickty have a Drum at your Window.

Lady. I'll hide my Contempt of Tinsel for once, if it be but to see what this Wench drives at.

Ab. Why, fuppofe your Husband, after this fair Warning he has given you, fhou'd found you an Alarm at Midnight; then open your Curtains with a Face as pale as my Apron, and cry out with a hollow Voice, What doft thou do in Bed with this Spindle-fhank'd Fellow?

Lady. Why wilt thou needs have it to be my Husband? he never had any reafon to be offended at me. I always lov'd him while he was living, and fhou'd prefer him to any Man, were he fo ftill. Mr. Tinfel is indeed very idle in his Talk, but I fancy, Abigal, a different Woman might reform him.

Ab. That's a likely matter indeed; did you ever hear of a Woman who had Power over a Man, when the was his Wife, that had none while the was his Miftrefs! Oh! there's nothing in the World improves a Man in his Complaifance like Marriage!

Lady. He is indeed, at prefent, too familiar in his Converfation.

Ab. Familiar! Madam, in Troth he's down-right rude. - Lady. But that you know, Abigal, fhows he has no Diffimulation in him—— Then he is apt to jeft a little too much upon grave Subjects.

Ab. Grave Subjects! he jefts upon the Church.

Lady. But that you know, Abigal, may be only to fhow his Wit— Then it must be own'd, he is extreamly Talkative.

Lady.

Ab. Talkative d'ye call it ! he's down-right Impertinent.

The Haunted House.

Lady. But that you know, Abigal, is a Sign he has been us'd to good Company — Then indeed he is very politive.

Ab. Positive! Why he contradicts you in every thing you fay.

Lady. But then you know, Abigal, he has been educated at the Inns of Court.

Ab. A bleffed Education indeed! it has made him forget his Catechifm!

Lady. You talk as if you hated him.

Ab. You talk as if you lov'd him.

Lady. Hold your Tongue ! here he comes.

Enter Tinsel.

Tin. My dear Widow!

Ab. My dear Widow! marry come up!

Lady. Let him alone, Abigal; so long as he does not call me My dear Wife, there's no Harm done.

Afide.

Alide.

Tim

Tin. I have been most ridiculously diverted fince I left you --- Your Servants have made a Convert of my Booby. His Head is fo filled with this foolish Story of a Drummer, that I expect the Rogue will be afraid hereafter to go upon a Message by Moon-light.

Lady. Ah, Mr. Tinfel, what a Lofs of Billet-doux would that be to many a fine Lady!

Ab. Then you still believe this to be a foolish Story? I thought my Lady had told you, that she had heard it her felf.

Tin. Ha, ha, ha!

Ab. Why, you would not perfwade us out of our Senfes? -Tin. Ha, ha, ha!

Ab. There's Manners for you, Madam.

Lady. Admirably rally'd! that Laugh is unanfwerable! Now I'll be hang'd if you could forbear being witty upon me, if I should tell you I heard it no longer ago than last Night.

Tin. Fancy !...

Lady. But what if I should tell you my Maid was with me !

Tin. Vapours! Vapours! Pray, my dear Widow, will you answer me one Question? --- Had you ever this Noise of a Drum in your Head, all the while your Husband was living?

Lady. And pray, Mr. Tinfel, will you let me ask you another Queftion? Do you think we can Hear in the Country, as well as you do in Town? Tin. Believe me, Madam, I could prescribe you a Cure for these Imaginations.

Ab. Don't tell my Lady of Imaginations, Sir, I have heard it my felf.

Tin. Hark thee, Child — art thou not an old Maid? Ab. Sir, if I am, it is my own Fault.

Tin. Whims! Freaks! Megrims! indeed Mrs. Abigal.

Ab. Marry, Sir, by your Talk one would believe you thought every thing that was good is a Megrim.

Lady. Why truly I don't very well understand what you meant by your Doctrine to me in the Garden just now, that every thing we faw was made by Ghance.

Ab. A very pretty Subject indeed for a Lover to divert his Mistrefs with.

Lady. But I suppose that was only a Taste of the Converfation you would entertain me with after Marriage.

Tin. Oh, I shall then have time to read you such Lectures of Motions, Atoms, and Nature —— that you shall learn to think as Freely as the best of us, and be convinced in less than a Month, that all about us is Chance-work.

Lady. You are a very complaifant Perfon indeed; and fo you would make your Court to me, by perfwading me that I was made by Chance!

Tin. Ha, ha, ha! well faid, my Dear! why, faith, thou wert a very lucky Hit, that's certain!

Lady. Pray, Mr. Tinsel, where did you learn this odd way of talking?

Tin. Ah, Widow, 'tis your Country Innocence makes you think it an odd way of talking.

Lady. Tho' you give no Credit to Stories of Apparitions, I hope you believe there are fuch things as Spirits!

Tin. Simplicity!

Ab. I fancy you don't believe Women have Souls, d'ye Sir? Tin. Foolifh enough!

Lady. I vow, Mr. Tinsel, I'm afraid malicious People will fay I'm in Love with an Atheist.

Tin. Oh, my Dear, that's an old-fashion'd Word —— I'm a Free thinker, Child.

Lady.

Ab. I am sure you are a Free-speaker!

The Haunted Houle.

II

lift

Lady. Really, Mr. Tinfel, confidering that you are fo fine a Gentleman, I'm amaz'd where you got all this Learning ! I wonder it has not fpoil'd your Breeding.

Tin. To tell you the Truth, I have not time to look into these dry Matters my self, but I am convinc'd by four or five learned Men, whom I fometimes over-hear at a Coffee-house I frequent, that our Fore-fathers were a Pack of Asses, that the World has been in an Error for some Thousands of Years, and that all the People upon Earth, excepting those two or three worthy Gentlemen, are impos'd upon, cheated, bubbled, abus'd, bamboozl'd——

Ab. Madam, how can you hear fuch a Profligate? he talks like the London Prodigal.

Lady. Why really, I'm a thinking, if there be no fuch things as Spirits, a Woman has no Occasion for marrying —— She need not be afraid to lye by her felf.

Tin. Ah! my Dear! are Husbands good for nothing but to frighten away Spirits? Doft thou think I could not instruct thee in several other Comforts of Matrimony?

Lady. Ah! but you are a Man of fo much Knowledge, that you would always be laughing at my Ignorance — You learned Men are fo apt to defpife one!

Tin. No, Child! I'd teach thee my Principles, thou should'st be as wife as I am — in a Week's time.

Lady. Do you think your Principles would make a Woman the better Wife?

Tin. Prithee, Widow, don't be queer.

Lady. I love a gay Temper, but I would not have you rally things that are ferious.

Tin. Well enough faith! where's the Jeft of rallying any thing elfe!

Ab. Ah, Madam, did you ever hear Mr. Fantome talk at this Rate?

Tin. But where's this Ghoft! this Son of a Whore of a Drummer? I'd fain hear him methinks.

Ab. Pray, Madam, don't luffer him to give the Ghost such ill Language, especially when you have Reason to believe it is my Master.

Tin. That's well enough faith, Nab; dost thou think thy Master is so unreasonable, as to continue his Claim to his Re-lift after his Bones are laid? Pray, Widow, remember the Words of your Contract, you have fulfill'd them to a Tittle... Did not you marry Sir George to the Tune of 'till Death us do part?

Lady. I must not hear Sir George's Memory treated in so flight a Manner — This Fellow must have been at some Pains make himself such a finish'd Coxcomb. [Afide.

Tin. Give me but Possefion of your Person, and I'll whirle you up to Town for a Winter, and cure you at once. Oh! I have known many a Country Lady come to London with frightful Storics of the Hall-House being haunted, of Fairies, Spirits, and Witches; that by the time she had seen a Comedy, play'd at an Assembly, and ambled in a Ball or two, has been so little assess that so the has ventur'd home in a Chair at all Hours of the Night.

Ab. Hum --- Sauce-box.

Tin. 'Tis the Solitude of the Country that creates these Whimfies; there was never such a thing as a Ghost heard of at London, except in the Play-house — Oh we'd pass all our time in London. 'Tis the Scene of Pleasure and Diversions, where there's something to amuse you every Hour of the Day. Life's not Life in the Country.

Aside.

Lady. Well then, you have an Opportunity of flowing the Sincerity of that Love to me which you profess. You may give a Proof that you have an Affection to my Person, not my Jointure.

Tin. Your Jointure! How can you think me fuch a Dog! But, Child, won't your Jointure be the fame thing in London as in the Country?

Lady. No, you're deceiv'd! You must know it is settled on me by Marriage-Articles, on Condition that I live in this old Mansion-House, and keep it up in Repair.

Tin. How!

Ab. That's well put, Madam.

Tin. Why faith I have been looking upon this Houfe, and think it is the prettieft Habitation I ever faw in my Life.

Lady. Ay, but then this cruel Drum !

Tin. Something fo venerable in it!

Lady. Ay, but the Drum!

Tin. For my part, I like this Gothick Way of Building better than any of your new Orders— it wou'd be a thousand pities it shou'd fall to Ruin. Lady. Ay, but the Drum!

Tin. How pleafantly we two could pafs our Time in this delicious Situation. Our Lives wou'd be a continued Dream of Happinefs. Come, faith, Widow, let's go upon the Leads, and take a View of the Country.

Lady. Ay, but the Drum! the Drum!

Tin. My Dear, take my Word for't 'tis all Fancy: Befides, fhou'd he drum in thy very Bed-Chamber, I shou'd only hug thee the closer.

ACT

Class'd in the Folds of Love, I'd meet my Doom, And act my Joys, the' Thunder shook the Room.

ACT II. SCENE I.

SCENE opens, and discovers Vellum in his Office, and a Letter in his Hand.

Vel. THIS Letter aftonisheth, may I believe my own Eyes... or rather my Spectacles— To Humphrey Vellum Esg; Steward to the Lady Truman.

Vellum,

I Doubt not but you will be glad to hear your Master is alive, and designs to be with you in half an Hour. The Report of my being slain in the Netherlands, has, I find, produced some Disorders in my Family. I am now at the George-Inn: If an old Man with a grey Beard, in a black Cloak, enquires after you, give him Admittance. He passes for a Conjurer, but is really Your Faithful Friend,

G. Truman.

?. S. Let this be a Secret, and you shall find your Account in it.

This amazeth me! and yet the Reafons why I should believe it is still living are manifold — First, Because this has often been the Case of other Military Adventurers.

Secondly, Because the News of his Death was first publish'd Dier's Letter.

Thirdly, Becaufe this Letter can be written by none but imfelf—____ I know his Hand, and manner of Spelling. Fourthly,_____

Enter Butler.

But. Sir, here's a strange old Gentleman that asks for you; e fays he's a Conjurer, but he looks very suspicious; I wish e ben't a Jesuit.

Vel. Admit him immediately.

But. I wish he ben't a Jesuit; but he fays he's nothing but Conjurer.

Vel. He fays right—— He is no more than a Conjurer. ring him in and withdraw. [Exit Butler.

And Fourthly, As I was faying, Becaufe_____

The Haunted House:

Enter Butler with Sir George.

But. Sir, here is the Conjurer — What a devilish long Beard he has! I warrant it has been growing these hundred Years.

Sir. G. Dear Vellum, you have receiv'd my Letter: But before we proceed lock the Door.

Vel. It is his Voice.

[Shuts the Door.

IS

Sir. G. In the next place help me off with this cumbersome Cloak.

Vel. It is his Shape.

Sir G. So, now lay my Beard upon the Table.

Vel. [After having look'd on Sir George thro' his Spectacles] It is his Face, every Lineament!

Sir G. Well now, I have put off the Conjurer and the old Man, I can talk to thee more at my Eafe

Vel. Believe me, my good Master, I am as much rejoiced to see you alive, as I was upon the Day you were born. Your Nam was, in all the News-Papers, in the List of those that were flain.

S.r G. We have not Time to be particular. I fhall only tell thee in general, that I was taken Prifoner in the Battle, and was under clofe Confinement for feveral Months. Upon my Releafe, I was refelv'd to furprize my Wife with the News of my being alive. I know, Vellum, you are a Perfon of fo much Penetration that I need not use any further Arguments to convince you that I am fo.

Vel. I am — and moreover, I question not but your good Lady will likewise be convinced of it. Her Ho--nour is a difcerning Lady.

Str G. I'm only afraid the thou'd be convinc'd of it to her Sorrow. Is not the pleas'd with her imaginary Widowhood? Tell me truly, was the afflicted at the Report of my Death? Vel. Sorely.

Sir G. How long did her Grief laft?

Vel. Longer than I have known any Widow's — at least three Days.

Sir G. Three Days, fayst thou? Three whole Days? I'm afraid thou flatterest me !----- O Woman! Woman!

Vel. Grief is twofold.

Sir G. This Blockhead is as methodical as ever—but I know he's honeft.

Vel. There is a real Grief, and there is a methodical Grief; the was drown'd in Tears 'till fuch time as the Taylor had made her Widow's Weeds—— Indeed they became her.

Sir G. Became her! And was that her Comfort? Truly a most feasonable Consolation!

Vel. But I must needs fay she paid a due Regard to your Memory, and could not forbear weeping when she faw Company.

Sir G. That was kind indeed! I find the griev'd with a great deal of Good-Breeding. But how comes this Gang of Lovers about her?

Afide.

Afide.

Afide.

Sir

Vel. Her Jointure is confiderable.

Sir G. How this Fool torments me!

Vel. Her Person is amiable-

Sir G. Death!

Vel. But her Character is unblemish'd. She has been as virtuous in your Absence as a Penelope-

Sir G. And has had as many Suitors.

Vel. Several have made their Overtures.

Sir G. Several!

Vel. But she has rejected all.

Sir G. There thou reviv'ft me—But what means this Tinfel? Are his Visits acceptable?

Vel. He is young.

Sir G. Does the liften to him?

Vel. He is gay.

Sir G. Sure the could never entertain a Thought of marrying fuch a Coxcomb!

Vel. He is not ill made.

Sir G. Are the Vows and Protestations that pass between us come to this! I can't bear the Thought of it! Is Tinsel the Man defign'd for my worthy Successor?

Vel. You do not confider that you have been dead these fourteen Months

Sir. G. Was there ever fuch a Dog?

Vel. And I have often heard her fay, that the mult never expect to find a fecond Sir G. Truman — meaning your Ho--nour.

The Haunted Houle.

Vel.

Sir G. I think the lov'd me, but I muft fearch into this Story of the Drummer before I difcover my felf to her. I have put on this Habit of a Conjurer, in order to introduce my felf. It muft be your Business to recommend me as a most profound Person, that by my great Knowledge in the curious Arts can filence the Drummer, and disposses the House.

Vel. I am going to lay my Accounts before my Lady, and I will endeavour to prevail upon her Ho--nour to admit the Tryal of your Art.

Sir G. I have fcarce heard of any of these Stories that did not arise from a Love Intrigue — Amours raise as many Ghosts as Murders.

Vel. Mrs. Abigal endeavours to perswade us, that 'tis your Ho-nour who troubles the House.

Sir G. That convinces me'tis a Cheat; for I think, Vellum, I may be pretty well affur'd it is not me.

Vel. I am apt to think fo truly. Ha-ha-ha!

Sir G. Abigal had always an Afcendant over her Lady, and if there is a Trick in this Matter, depend upon it fhe is at the Bottom of it. I'll be hang'd if this Ghoft be not one of Abigal's Familiars.

Vel. Mrs. Abigal has of late been very mysterious.

Sir G. I fancy, Vellum, thou could'st worm it out of her. I know formerly there was an Amour between you.

Vel. Mrs. Abigal hath her Allurements, and she knows I have pick'd up a Competency in your Ho--nour's Service.

Sir G. If thou ha'ft, all I ask of thee in return is, that thou would'ft immediately renew thy Addreffes to her. Coax her up. Thou haft fuch a Silver Tongue, Vellum, as 'twill be impoffible for her to withft and. Befides, fhe is fo very a Woman, that fhe'll like thee the better for giving her the Pleafure of telling a Secret. In fhort, wheedle her out of it, and I fhall act by the Advice which thou giveft me.

Vel. Mrs. Abigal was never deaf to me, when I talked upon that Subject. I will take an Opportunity of addreffing my felf to her in the most pathetick Manner.

Sir G. In the mean time lock me up in your Office, and bring me word what Success you have — Well, fure I am the first that ever was employ'd to lay himself.

The Drummer; Or,

Vel. You act indeed a threefold Part in this Houfe; you are a Ghoft, a Conjurer, and my Ho--noured Mafter Sir George Truman; he, he, he! You will pardon me for being jocular. Sir G. O. Mr. Vellum, with all my Heart. You know I

Sir G. O, Mr. Vellum, with all my Heart. You know I love you Men of Wit and Humour. Be as merry as thou pleafeft, fo thou do'ft thy Bufinefs. [Mimicking him.] You will remember, Vellum, your Commission is two-fold, first to gain Admission for me to your Lady, and fecondly to get the Secret out of Abigal.

Vel. It sufficeth.

The Scene Shuts.

Enter Lady fola.

Lady. Women who have been happy in a first Marriage, are the most apt to venture upon a second. But for my part, I had a Husband fo every way fuited to my Inclinations, that I must entirely forget him, before I can like another Man. I have now been a Widow but fourteen Months, and have had twice as many Lovers, all of 'em profest Admirers of my Person, but paffionately in love with my Jointure. I think it is a Revenge I owe my Sex to make an Example of this worthless Tribe of Fellows, who grow impudent, drefs themfelves fine, and fancy we are oblig'd to provide for 'em. But of all my Captives, Mr. Tinfel is the most extraordinary in his kind. I hope the Diversion I give my felf with him is unblameable. I'm fure'tis neceffary to turn my Thoughts off from the Memory of that dear Man, who has been the greatest Happiness and Affliction of my Life. My Heart would be a Prey to Melancholy, if I did not find these innocent Methods of relieving it. But here comes Abigal. I must teaze the Baggage, for I find the has taken it into her Head that I am entirely at her Disposal.

Enter Abigal.

Ab. Madam! Madam! yonder's Mr. Tinfel has as good as taken Poffeffion of your Houfe. Marry, he fays, he must have Sir George's Apartment enlarg'd; for truly, fays he, I hate to be straiten'd. Nay, he was so impudent as to shew me the Chamber where he intends to confummate, as he calls it.

Lady.

Lady. Well! he's a wild Fellow.

Ab. Indeed he's a very fad Man, Madam.

18

Lady. He's young, Abigal, 'tis a thouland Pities he should be loft; I should be mighty glad to reform him. Ab. Reform him ! marry hang him! Lady. Has not he a great deal of Life? Ab. Ay, enough to make your Heart ake. Lady. I dare say thou think's thim a very agreeable Fellow. Ab. He thinks himfelf so, I'll answer for him. Lady. He's very good-natur'd! Ab. He ought to be so, for he's very filly. Lady. Dost thou think he loves me? Ab. Mr. Fantome did I am fure. Lady. With what Raptures he talk'd! Ab. Yes, but 'twas in Praise of your Jointure-House. Lady. He has kept bad Company. Ab. They must be very bad indeed, if they were worse than himfelf.

Lady. I have a ftrong Fancy a good Woman might reform him.

Ab. It wou'd be a fine Experiment, if it shou'd not succeed. Lady. Well, Abigal, we'll talk of that another time; here comes the Steward, I have no further Occasion for you at present. [Exit Abigal:

Enter Vellum.

Vel. Madam, is your Ho—nour at Leifure to look into the Accounts of the last Week? They rife very high— Housekeeping is chargeable in a House that is haunted.

Lady. How comes that to país? I hope the Drum neither eats nor drinks? But read your Account, Vellum.

Vel. [putting on and off his Spectacles in this Scene] A Hogfhead and a Half of Ale—it is not for the Ghoft's Drinking— But your Ho—nour's Servants fay they must have fomething to keep up their Courage against this strange Noise. They tell me they expect a double Quantity of Malt in their Small-Beer fo long as the House continues in this Condition.

Lady. At this rate they'll take care to be frighten'd all the Year round, I'll answer for 'em. But go on.

Vel. Item, Two Sheep, and a _____ Where is the Ox ?_____ Oh, here I have him _____ and an Ox_____ Your He____ nour must always have a Piece of cold Beef in the House for the Entertainment of so many Strangers, who come from all Parts to hear this Drum. Item, Bread, ten Peck-Loaves — They cannot eat Beef without Bread — Item, three Barrels of Table Beer — They must have Drink with their Meat.

Lady. Sure no Woman in England has a Steward that makes fuch ingenious Comments on his Works.

Vel. Item, to Mr. Tinfel's Servants five Bottles of Port Wine-It was by your Ho--nour's Order ----- Item, three Bottles of Sack for the use of Mrs. Abigal.

Lady. I suppose that was by Your own Order.

Vel. We have been long Friends, we are your Ho--nour's Ancient Servants, Sack is an Innocent Cordial, and gives her Spirit to chide the Servants, when they are tardy in their Bus'nefs; he, he, he! pardon me for being Jocular.

Lady. Well, I fee you'll come together at laft.

Vel. Item, a dozen Pound of Watch Lights for the Use of the Servants.

Lady. For the Use of the Servants! What, are the Rogues afraid of fleeping in the Dark? What an unfortunate Woman am 1! This is such a particular Diffres, it puts me to my Wits End. Vellam, what wou'd you advise me to do?

Vel. Madam, your Ho-nour has two Points to confider. Imprimit, To retrench these Extravagant Expences, which so many Strangers bring upon you. ——Secondly, To clear the House of this Invisible Drummer

Lady. This learned Division leaves me just as wife as I was. But how must we bring these two Points to bear?

Vel. I befeech your Ho--nour to give me the hearing.

Lady. I do. But prithee take pity on me, and be not tedious. Vel. I will be concife. There is a certain Perfon arrived this Morning, an aged Man of a venerable Afpect, and of a long hoary Beard, that reacheth down to his Girdle. The common People call him a Wizard, a White-Witch, a Conjurer, a Cunning-Man, a Necromancer, a —

Lady. No matter for his Titles. But what of all this?

Vel. Give me the hearing, good my Lady! he pretends to great Skill in the Occult Sciences, and is come hither upon the rumor of this Drum. If one may believe him, he knows the Secret of laying Ghofts, or of quieting Houfes that are haunted.

Lady. Pho, thefe are Idle Stories to amufe the Country People, this can do us no good.

Vel. It can do us no harm, my Lady.

Lady:

Lady. I dare fay thou do'ft not believe there is any thing in it thy felf.

Vel. I cannot fay, I do; there is no danger however in the Experiment. Let him try his Skill; if it fhou'd fucceed, we are rid of the Drum; if it fhou'd not, we may tell the World that it has, and by that means at leaft get out of this Expensive way of living; fo that it must turn to your Advantage one way or another.

Lady. I think you argue very rightly. But where is the Man? I would fain fee him. He must be a Curiofity.

Vel. I have already difcours'd him, and he is to be with me. in my Office, half an Hour hence. He asks nothing for his Pains, till he has done his Work; ----- no Cure, no Mony.

Lady. That Circumstance, I must confess, wou'd make one believe there is more in his Art than one wou'd imagine. Pray Vellum go and fetch him hither immediately.

Vel. I am gone. He shall be forth-coming forthwith.

Enter Butler, Coachman, and Gardiner.

But. Rare News, my Lads, rare News!

Gard. What's the Matter? haft thou got any more Vales for us?

But. No, 'tis better than that.

Coach. Is there another Stranger come to the Houfe? But. Ay, fuch a Stranger as will make all our Lives eafy.

Gard. What ! is he a Lord ?

Coach. A Conjurer! what, is he come a wooing to my Lady? But. No, no, you Fool, he's come a purpose to lay the Spirit Coach. Ay marry that's good News indeed; But where is he?

But. He's lock'd up with the Steward in his Office, they ar laying their Heads together very close. I fancy they are caffing a Figure.

Gard. Prithee John, what fort of a Creature is a Conjurer?

But. Why he's made much as other Men are, if it was not fo his long grey Beard.

Coach. Look ye Peter, it ftands with reason, that a Conjure shou'd have a long grey Beard for did ye ever know a Witch that was not an Old Woman? Gard. Why! I remember a Conjurer once at a Fayr, that to my thinking was a very Smock-fac'd Man, and yet he fpew'd out fifty Yards of green Ferret. I fancy, John, if thou'dfl get him into the Pantry and give him a Cup of Ale, he'd fhew us a few Tricks. Do'ft think we cou'd not perfuade him to fwallow one of thy Cafe-Knives for his Diversion? He'll certainly bring it np again.

But. Peter! thou art fuch a Wife-acre! Thou do'ft not know the Difference between a Conjurer and a Jugler. This Man muft be a very great Mafter of his Trade. His Beard is at least half a Yard long, he's drefs'd in a strange dark Cloak, as black as a Cole, your Conjurer always goes in Mourning.

Gard. Is he a Gentleman, had he a Sword by his Side?

But. No, no, he's too grave a Man for that, a Conjurer is as grave as a Judge, —— but he had a long white Wand in his-Hand.

Coach. You may be fure there's a good deal of Vertue in that Wand ——— I fancy 'tis made out of Witch Elm.

Gard. I warrant you if the Ghoft appears, he'll whisk ye that Wand before his Eyes, and ftrike you the Drum-flick out of his Hand.

But. No; the Wand, look ye, is to make a Circle, and if he once gets the Ghost in a Circle, then he has him —— let him get out again if he can. A Circle, you must know, is a Conjurer's Grap.

Coach. But what will he do with him, when he has him here?

But. Why then he'll overpower him with his Learning.

Gard. If he can once compais him, and get him in Lobs-Pound, ne'll make nothing of him, but fpeak a few hard Words to him, and perhaps bind him over to his good Behaviour, for a Thouand Years.

Coach. Ay, ay, he'll fend him packing to his Grave again with a Flea in his Ear, I warrant him.

But. No, no, I wou'd advise Madam to spare no Cost. If he Conjurer be but well paid, he'll take pains upon the Gho?, nd lay him, look ye, in the Red-Sea — and then he's laid for yer.

Coach. Ay marry, that wou'd fpoil his Drum for him.

Gard.

I DE IIMVINGA IIVAJE.

ACT

Gard. Why John, there must be a power of Spirits in that fame Red Sea — I warrant ye they are as plenty as Fish.

Coach. Well, I with after all that he may not be too hard for the Conjurer; I'm afraid he'll find a tough bit of work on't.

Gard. I wish the Spirit may not carry a Corner of the House off with him.

But. As for that, Peter, you may be fure that the Steward has made his Bargain with the Cunning-Man beforehand, that he fhall ftand to all Cofts, and Damages — But hark! yonder's Mrs. Abigal, we fhall have her with us immediately, if we do not get off.

Gard. Ay Lads! if we could get Mrs. Abigal well laid too we fhould lead merry Lives.

For to a Man like me that's Stout and Bold, A Ghoft is not so dreadful as a Scold.

ACT III. SCENE I.

L'IS DTUMMET ; UT,

SCENE opens, and discovers Sir George in Vellum's Office.

Sir G. I Wonder I don't hear of Vellum yet. But I know his Wildom will do nothing rafhly. The Fellow has been fo us'd to Form in Bulinefs, that it has infected his whole Conversation. But I must not find Fault with that punctual and exact Behaviour which has been of fo much Use to me; my Estate is the better for it.

Enter Vellum.

Well Vellum, I'm impatient to hear your Success.

Vel. First, let me lock the Door.

ZE

Sir G. Will your Lady admit me?

Vel. If this Lock is not mended foon, it will be quite fpoiled. Sir G. Prithee let the Lock alone at prefent, and answer me.

Vel. Delays in Bufinefs are dangerous —— I must fend for the Smith next Week —— and in the mean time will take a minute of it.

Sir G. But what fays your Lady?

Vel. This Pen is naught, and wants mending — My Lady, did you fay?

Sir G. Does the admit me?

Vel. I have gain'd Admission for you as a Conjurer.

Sir G. That's enough! I'll gain admission for my felf as a Husband. Does the believe there's any thing in my Art?

Vel. It is hard to know what a Woman believes.

Sir G.- Did she ask no Questions about me?

Vel. Sundry. ——— She defires to talk with youher felf, before you enter upon your Bulinefs.

Sir G. But when?

Vel. Immediately. This Inftant.

Sir G. Pugh. What haft thou been doing all this while! Why didft not tell me fo? Give me my Cloak — Have you yet met with Abigal?

Vel. I have not yet had an Opportunity of talking with her. But we have interchanged fome languishing Glauces.

Sir G. Let thee alone for that Vellum, I have formerly feen thee ogle her through thy Spectacles. Well! This is a most VeneVenerable Cloak. After the bufinefs of this Day is over, 1'11 make thee a Prefent of it. 'Twill become thee mightily.

Vel. He, he, he! wou'd you make a Conjurer of your Steward?

Sir G. Prithee don't be Jocular, I'm in haste. Help me on with my Beard.

Vel. And what will your Hc-nour do with your caft Beard?

Sir G. Why, faith, thy Gravity wants only fuch a Beard to it; if thou would'fl wear it with the Cloak, thou woud'ft make a most compleat Heathen Philosopher. But where's my Wand?

Vel. A fine taper Stick ! It is well chosen. I will keep this till you are Sheriff of the County. It is not my custome to let any thing be lost.

Sir G. Come Vellum, lead the way. You must introduce me to your Lady. Thou'rt the fittest Fellow in the World to be a Master of the Ceremonies to a Conjurer. [Encent

Enter Abigal croffing the Stage, Tinfel following.

Tinfel. Nabby, Nabby, whither fo fast Child?

Ab. Keep your Hands to your felf. I'm going to call the Steward to my Lady.

Tin. What? Goodman Two fold? I met him walking with a ftrange old Fellow yonder. I fuppofe he belongs to the Family too. He looks very antique. He must be fome of the Furniture of this old Mansion-House.

Ab. What does the Man mean? Don't think to palm me, as you do my Lady.

Tin. Prithee, Nabby, tell me one thing; What's the reafon thou art my Enemy?

Ab. Marry, because I'm a Friend to my Lady.

Tin. Doft thou fee any thing about me thou doft not like? Come hither, Huffy, give me a Kifs. Don't be ill-natur'd.

Ab. Sir, I know how to be civil. [Kiffes her.] - This Rogue will carry off my Lady, if I don't take care. [Afide.

Tin. Thy Lips are as foft as Velvet, Abigal. I must get thee a Husband.

Ab. Ay, now you don't fpeak idly, I can talk to you.

Tin. I have one in my Eye for thee. Doft thou love a young lufty Son of a Whore?

Е

: Ab.

Ab. Laud, how you talk!

Tin. This is a thundering Dog.

Ab. What is he?

Tin. A private Gentleman.

Ab. Ay ! where does he live?

Tin. In the Horfe-Guards — But he has one Fault I must tell thee of. If thou canft bear with that, he's a Man for thy purpofe.

Ab. Pray, Mr. Tinsel, what may that be?

Tin. He's but five and twenty Years Old.

Ab. 'Tis no matter for his Age, if he has been well educated.

Tin. No Man better, Child; he'll tye a Wigg, tofs a Die, make a Pafs, and fwear with fuch a Grace, as wou'd make thy Heart leap to hear him.

Ab. Half these Accomplishments will do, provided he has an Estate — Pray what has he?

Tin. Not a Farthing.

Ab. Pax on him, what do I give him the hearing for ! [Afide. Tin. But as for that I wou'd make it up to him.

Ab. How ?

Tin. Why look ye, Child, as foon as I have married thy Lady, I defign to difcard this old Prig of a Steward, and to put this honeft Gentleman, I am fpeaking of, into his place.

Ab. [afide.] This Fellow's a Fool —— I'll have no more to fay to him.—Hark! my Lady's a coming!

Tin. Depend upon it, Nab, I'll remember my Promise.

Ab. Ay, and fo will I too - to your Coft.

Tin. My Dear is purely fitted up with a Maid — But I shall rid the House of her.

Afide ...

Lady.

Enter Lady.

Tin. She loves me to Diffraction, I fee that. [Afide.] -- Frithee, Widow, explain thy felf.

Lady. You must know here is a strange fort of a Man come to Town, who undertakes to free the House from this Disturbance. The Steward believes him a Conjurer.

Tin. Ay; thy Steward is a deep one !...

Lady. He's to be here immediately. It is indeed an odd Figure of a Man.

TIONIC

Tin. Oh! I warrant you he has fludy'd the Black Art! - Ha, ha, ha! Is not it an Oxford Scholar? — Widow, thy Houfe is the most extraordinarily inhabited of any Widow's this Day in Christendom. — I think thy four chief Domesticks are a wither'd Abigal — a superannuated Steward, — a Ghost — and a Conjurer.

Lady. [Mimicking Tinfel] And you wou'd have it inhabited by a Fifth, who is a more extraordinary Perfon than any of all thefe Four.

Tin. It's a fure Sign a Woman loves you, when the imitates your Manner. [afide] — Thou'rt very fmart, my Dear. But, fee! fmoak the Doctor.

• Enter Vellum, and Sir George in his Conjurer's Hubit.

Vel. L will introduce this profound Perfon to your Ladyship, and then leave him with you —— Sir, this is her Ho—nour. Sir G. I know it well.

[Afide, walking in a mufing Posture] That dear Woman! The Sight of her un-mans me. I cou'd weep for Tenderness, did not I, at the fame time, feel an Indignation rise in me, to see that Wretch with her: And yet I cannot but smile to see her in the Company of her first and second Husband at the same time.

Lady. Mr. Tinsfel do You speak to him; you are us'd to the Company of Men of Learning.

Tin. Old Gentleman, thou doft not look like an Inhabitant of this World; I suppose thou art lately come down from the Stars. Pray what News is flirring in the Zodiack?

Sir G. News that ought to make the Heart of a Coward tremble. Mars is now entring into the first House, and will shortly appear in all his Domal Dignities—

Tin. Mars? Prithee Father Grey-beard explain thy felf.

Sir G. The Entrance of Mars into his Houfe, portends the Entrance of a Mafter into this Family — and that foon.

Tin. D'ye hear that, Widow? The Stars have cut me out for thy Husband. This Houfe is to have a Mafter, and that foon— Hark thee, old Gadbury, Is not Mars very like a young Fellow call'd Tom Tinfet?

Sir G. Not fo much as Venus is like this Lady.

E 2

Tin.

Tin. A Word in your Ear, Doctor; these two Planets will be in Conjunction by and by; I can tell you that.

Sir G. [afide, walking difturb'd] Curfe on this impertment Fop! I shall fearce forbear difcovering my felf — Madam, I am told that your Houfe is visited with strange Noises.

Lady. And I am told that you can quiet them. I must confess I had a Curiofity to fee the Perfon I had heard fo much of; and, indeed, your Afpect shows that you have had much Experience in the World. You must be a very aged Man.

Sir G. My Afpect deceives you; What do you think is my real Age?

Tin. I thou'd guels thee within three Years of Methufelab. Prithee tell me, Was't not thou born before the Flood?

Lady. Truly I fhou'd guess you to be in your second or third Century. I warrant you, you have Great Grand-children with Beards of a Foot long.

Sir G. Ha, ha, ha! If there be Truth in Man, I was but five and thirty last August. O! the Study of the Occult Sciences makes a Man's Beard grow faster than you wou'd imagine.

Lady. What an Escape you have had, Mr. Tinfel, that you were not bred a Scholar!

Tin. And fo I fancy, Doctor, thou think it me an illiterate Fellow, because I have a smooth Chin?

Sir G. Hark ye, Sir, a Word in your Ear. You are a Coxcomb, by all the Rules of Phyfiognomy: But let that be a Secret between you and me. [Afide to Tinfel.

Lady. Pray, Mr. Tinfel, what is it the Doctor whilpers?

Tin. Only a Compliment, Child, upon two or three of my Features. It does not become Me to repeat it.

Lady. Pray, Doctor, examine this Gentleman's Face, and tell me his Fortunc.

Sir G. If I may believe the Lines of his Face, he likes it better than I do, or — than you do, fair Lady.

Tin. Widow, I hope now thou'rt convinc'd he's a Cheat.

Lady. For my part I believe he's a Witch - go on Doctor.

Sir G. He will be crofs'd in Love; and that foon.

Tin. Prithee, Doctor, tell us the Truth. Dost not thou live in Moor-Fields?

Sir G. Take my Word for it, thou shalt never live in my Lady Truman's Mansion-House. Tin. Tin. Pray, old Gentleman, haft thou never been pluck'd by the Beard when thou wert faucy?

Lady. Nay Mr. Tinsel, you are angry! do you think I wou'd marry a Man that dares not have his Fortune told?

Sir G. Let him be angry— I matter not— He is but fhortliv'd. He will foon die of—

Tin. Come, come, speak out, old Hocus, he, he, he! this Fellow makes me burft with Laughing [Forces a Laugh.

Sir G. He will foon die of a Fright — or of the let me fee your Nofe — Ay — 'tis fo!

Tin. You Son of a Whore! I'll run ye through the Body. Inever yet made the Sun (hine through a Conjurer_____

Lady. Oh, fy. Mr. Tinfel! you will not kill an old Man? Tin. An old Man! The Dog fays he's but Five and thirty.

Lady. Oh, fy; Mr. Tinf.l, I did not think you could have been 10 passionate; I hate a passionate Man. Put up your Sword, or I must never see you again.

Tin. Ha, ha, ha! I was but in jeft, my Dear. I had a mind to have made an Experiment upon the Dector's Body. I wou'd but have drill'd a little Eyelet-hole in it, and have feen whether he had Art enough to close it up again.

Sir G. Courage is but ill shown before a Lady. But know, if ever I meet the again, thou shalt find this Arm can wield other Weapons besides this Wand.

Tin. Ha, ha, ha!

Lady. Well, learned Sir, you are to give a Proof of your Art, not of your Courage. Or if you will how your Courage, let it be at Nine a Clock for that is the time the Noife is generally heard.

Tin. And look ye, old Gentleman, if thou doft not do thy Bufinefs well, I can tell thee by the little Skill I have, that thou wilt be tofs'd in a Blanket before Ten. We'll do our Endeayour to fend thee back to the Stars again.

Sir G. I'll go and prepare my felf for the Ceremonies And, Lady, as you expect they shou'd fucceed to your Wishes, treat that Fellow with the Contempt he deferves. [Exit Sir G.

Tin. The fauciest Dog I ever talk'd with in my whole Life!

Tin

Lady. Methinks he's a diverting Fellow; one may fee he's no Fool.

Jin. No Fool! Ay but thou dost not take him for a Conjurer.

Lady. Truly I don't know what to take him for; I am refolv'd to employ him however. When a Sickness is desperate, we often try Remedies that we have no great Faith in.

Enter Abigal.

Ab. Madam, the Tea is ready in the Parlour as you ordered. Lady. Come, Mr. Tinfel, we may there talk of this Subject more at leifure. [Exeant Lady and Tinfel.

Abigal sola.

Sure never any Lady had fuch Servants as mine has! Well, if I get this Thoufand Pound, I hope to have fome of my own. Let me fee, I'll have a pretty tight Girl — juft fuch as I was ten Years ago (I'm afraid I may fay twenty) fhe fhall drefs me and flatter me — for I will be flatter'd, that's pos! My Lady's caft Suits will ferve her after I have given them the wearing. Befides, when I am worth a Thoufand Pound, I fhall certainly carry off the Steward — Madam Vellum' — how prettily that will found! here, bring out Madam Vellum's Chaife — Nay I do not know but it may be a Chariot — It will break the Attorney's Wife's Heart — for I fhall take place of every Body in the Parifh but my Lady. If I have a Son, he fhall be call'd Fantome. But fee Mr. Vellum, as I could wifh. I know his Humour, and will do my utmoft to gain his Heart.

Enter Vellum with a Pint of Sack.

Vel. Mrs. Abigal, don't I break in upon you unfeafonably? Ab. Oh, No, Mr. Vellum, your Vifits are always feafonable. Vel. I have brought with me a Tafte of fresh Canary, which I think is delicious.

Ab. Pray fet it down — I have a Dram-Glass just by _____ [Brings in a Rummer.]

J'll pledge you; my Lady's good Health.

Vel. And your own with it ---- fwcet Mrs Abigal.

Ab. Pray, good Mr. Vellum, buy me a little Parcel of this Sack, and put it under the Article of Tea — I would not have my Name appear to it.

Vel. Mrs. Abigal, your Name feldom appears in my Bills and yet —— if you will allow me a merry Expression —— You have been always in my Books, Mrs. Abigal. Ha, ha, ha !

Ab.

Ine Liannea Flouje.

Ab. Ha, ha, ha! Mr. Vellum, you are fuch a dry jefting Man! Vel. Why truly, Mrs. Abigal, I have been looking over my Papers — and I find you have been a long time my Debtor.

Ab. Your Debtor! For what, Mr. Vellum?

Vel. For my Heart, Mrs. Abigal —— And our Accounts will not be balanc'd between us, 'till I have yours in Exchange for it. Ha, ha, ha !

Ab. Ha, ha, ha! You are the most gallant Dun, Mr. Vellum. Vel. But I am not us'd to be paid by Words only, Mrs. Abigal; when will you be out of my Debt?

Ab. Oh, Mr. Vellum, you make one blush — My humble Service to you.

Vel. I must answer you, Mrs. Abigal, in the Country Phrase----Tour Love is sufficient. Ha, ha, ha!

Ab. Ha, ha, ha! Well, I must own I love a merry Man!

Vel. Let me fee, how long is it, Mrs. Abigal, fince I first broke my Mind to you — It was, I think, Undecimo Gulielmi — We have convers'd together these fifteen Years and yet, Mrs. Abigal, I must drink to our better Acquaintance. He, he, he — Mrs. Abigal, you know I am naturally jocose.

Ab. Ah, you Men love to make Sport with us filly Creatures.

Vel. Mrs. Abigal, I have a Trifle about me, which I wou'd willingly make you a Prefent of. It is indeed but a little Toy.

Ab. You are always exceedingly obliging.

Vel. It is but a little Toy- fcarce worth your Acceptance.

Ab. Pray do not keep me in Suspence; what is it, Mr. Vellum?

Vel. A Silver Thimble.

Ab. I always faid Mr. Vellum was a generous Lover.

Vel. But I must put it on my self, Mrs. Abigal—You have the prettiest Tip of a Finger—I must take the Freedom to falute it.

Ab. Oh fye! you make me asham'd, Mr. Vellum; how can you do so? I protect I am in such a Confusior.

[A feign'd Struggle. Vel. This Finger is not the Finger of Idlenefs; it bears the honourable Scars of the Needle_____ But why are you fo cruel as not to pare your Nails?

Ab.

INS DIMMINET, VI,

Ab. Oh, I vow you prefs it fo hard! pray give me my Finger agair.

Vel. This Middle Finger, Mrs. Abigal, has a pretty Neighbour ---- A Wedding Ring would become it mightily ---- He, he, he.

Ab. You're fo full of your Jokes. Ay, but where must I find one for it?

Vel. I-defign this Thimble only as the Forerunner of it, they will fet off each other, and are ----- indeed a twofold Emblem. The first will put you in mind of being a good Huswife, and the other of being a good Wife. Ha, ha, ha!

Ab. Yes, yes, I fee you laugh at me.

Vel. Indeed I am ferious.

22

Ab. I thought you had quite forfaken me-I am fure you cannot forget the many repeated Vows and Promifes you formerly made me.

Vel. I shou'd as foon forget the Multiplication Table.

Ab. I have always taken your part before my Lady.

Vel. You have fo, and I have Irem'd it in my Memory.

Ab. For I have always look'd upon your Intereft as my own.

Vel. It is nothing but your Cruelty can hinder them from being fo.

Ab. I must strike while the Iron's hot. [Afide] - Well, Mr. Vellum, there is no refufing you, you have fuch a bewitching Tongue!

Vel. How? Speak that again!

Ab. Why then in plain English I love you.

Vel. I'm Overjoy'd!

Ab. I must own my Passion for you,

[Catches her in his Arms. Vel. I'm Transported!

Ab. Dear Charming Man!

Vel. Thou Summ Total of all my Happiness ! I shall grow Extravagant ! I can't forbear !---- to drink thy vertuous Inclinations in a Bumper of Sack. Your Lady must make haste, my Duck, or we shall provide a young Steward to the Estate, before she has an Heir to it ----- prithee my Dear, doe's she intend to Marry Mr. Tinfel?

Ab. Marry him! my Love, No, no! we must take care of that ! there wou'd be no flaying in the Houfe for us if the did. That young Rake-hell wou'd fend all the old Servants a Grazing. You

Ine Mauntea Moule.

You and I shou'd be discarded before the Honey Moon was at an End.

Vel. Prithee, fweet one, does not this Drum put the Thoughts of Marriage out of her Head?

Ab. This Drum, my Dear, if it be well manag'd, will be no lefs than a Thoufand Pound in our way.

Vel. Ay, fayft thou fo, my Turtle?

Ab. Since we are now as good as Man and Wife —— I mean, almost as good as Man and Wife —— I ought to conceal nothing from you.

Vel. Certainly my Dove, not from thy Yoke-Fellow, thy Help-Mate, thy own Flefh and Blood!

Ab. Hush! I hear Mr. Tinsel's Laugh, my Lady and he are a coming this way; if you will take a turn without, I'll tell you the whole Contrivance.

Vel. Give me your Hand, Chicken.

Ab: Here take it, you have my Heart already.

Vel. We shall have much lifue.

[Excunt.

The Drummer; Or,

ACT IV. SCENE I.

Enter Vellum and Butler.

Vel. TOHN, I have certain Orders to give you — and therefore be attentive.

But. Attentive! Ay, let me alone for that.—I suppose he means being Sober.

Vel. You know I have always recommended to you a Method in your Bufinefs, I wou'd have your Knives and Forks, your Spoons and Napkins, your Plate and Glaffes, laid in a Method.

But. Ah, Master Vellum, you are such a sweet-spoken Man, it does one's Heart good to receive your Orders.

Vel. Method, John, makes Bufinefs eatie, it banishes all Perplexity and Confusion out of Families.

But. How he talks ! I cou'd hear him all Day.

Vel. And now John, let me know whether your Table linnen, your Side-Board, your Cellar, and every thing elfe within your Province, are properly and methodically difpos'd for an Entertainment this Evening.

But. Master Vellum, they shall be ready at a quarter of an hour's Warning. But pray Sir, is this Entertainment to be made for the Conjurer?

Vel. It is, John, for the Conjurer, and yet it is not for the Conjurer.

But. Why, look you Mafter Vellum, if it is for the Conjurer, the Cook-Maid shou'd have Orders to get him some Dishes to his Palate. Perhaps he may like a little Brimstone in his Sauce.

Vel. This Conjurer, John, is a complicated Creature, an Amphibious Animal, a Perfon of a Two-fold Nature — But he cats and drinks like other Men.

But. Marry, Master Vellum, he shou'd eat and drink as much as two other Men, by the Account you give of him.

V.l. Thy Conceit is not amifs, he is indeed a double Man, ha, ha, ha !

But. Ha! I understand you, He's one of your Hermaphrodites, as they call 'em.

Vel. He is Married, and he is not Married — He hath a Beard, and he hath no Beard. He is Old, and he is Young. But. But. How charmingly he talks! I fancy, Mafter Vellum, you cou'd make a Riddle. The fame Man Old and Young! How do you make that out, Mafter Vellum?

I DC ILAMITTCO LIUNCO

Vel. Thou haft heard of a Snake caffing his Skin, and recovering his Youth. Such is this Sage Perfon.

But. Nay 'tis no wonder a Conjurer shou'd be like a Serpent.

Vel. When he has thrown afide the old Conjurer's Slough that hangs about him, he'll come out as fine a young Gentleman as ever was feen in this Houfe.

But. Does he intend to fup in his Slough?

Vel. That Time will show.

But. Well, I have not a Head for these things. Indeed, Mr. Vellum, I have not understood one Word you have faid this half Hour.

Vel. I did not intend thou fhou'dft — But to our Business — Let there be a Table spread in the Great-Hall. Let your Pots and Glasses be wash'd, and in a Readiness. Bid the Cook provide a plentiful Supper, and see that all the Servants be in their best Liveries.

But. Ay! now. I understand every Word you fay. But I wou'd rather hear you talk a little in that t'other Way.

But. Two Pillows! Madam won't fleep upon 'em both! She is not a double Woman too ?

Vel. She will fleep upon neither. But hark, Mrs. Abigal, I think I hear her chiding the Cook-Maid.

But. Then I'll away, or it will be my Turn next; She, I am fure, fpeaks plain English, one may eafily understand every Word She fays. [Exit Butler.

Vellum Solus.

Vel. Servants are good for nothing, unlefs they have an Opinion of the Perfon's Underftanding who has the Direction of them. But fee Mrs. Abigal! fhe has a bewitching Countenance, I with I may not be tempted to marry her in good Earneft.

Enter Abigal

F

Ab

Ab. Ha! Mr. Vellum. Vel What brings my Sweet one hither? Ab. I am coming to fpeak to my Friend behind the Wainfcot. It is fit, Child, he shou'd have an Account of this Conjurer, that he may not be furpriz'd.

ING DIMMINETS ST.

Vel. That wou'd be as much as thy thousand Pound is worth.

Ab. I'll fpeak low-Walls have Ears. Pointing at the Wain foot.

Vel. But heark you Ducklin! be fure you do not tell him that I am let into the Secret.

Ab. That's a good one indeed ! as if I shou'd ever tell what passes between you and me.

Vel. No, no, my Child, that must not be; he, he! that must not be; he, he, he!

Ab. You will always be waggilh.

Vel. Adieu, and let me hear the refult of your Conference.

Ab. How can you leave one fo foon? I shall think it an Age till I fee you again.

Vel. Adieu my pretty one.

Ab. Adieu sweet Mr. Vellum.

Vel. My pretty one.

JU

Ab. Dear Mr. Vellum!

Vel. My pretty one ! -

Exit Vellum.

[As he is going off.

Abigal Sola.

Ab. I have him—if I can but get this Thousand Pound. [Fantome gives three Raps upon his Drum behind the Wain (cot.

Ab. Ha. Three Raps upon the Drum! the Signal Mr. Fantome and I agreed upon, when he had a mind to fpeak with me.

Ab. Very well, I hear you; come Fox, come out of your Hole.

Scene opens, and Fantome comes out.

Ab. You may leave your Drum in the Ward-robe, till you have Occasion for it.

Fan. Well, Mrs. Abigal, I want to hear what is a doing in the World.

Ab. You are a very inquifitive Spirit. But I must tell you, if you do not take care of your felf, you will be Laid this Evening.

Fan. I have overheard fomething of that Matter. But let me alone for the Doctor — I'll engage to give a good Account of Him.

The Haunted House,

Him. I am more in pain about Tinfel. When a Lady's in the Cafe, I'm more afraid of one Fop than twenty Conjures.

Ab. To tell you truly, he preffes his Attacks with fo much Impudence, that he has made more Progress with my Lady in two Days, than you did in two Months.

Fan. I shall attack her in another manner, if thou canft but procure me another Interview. There's nothing makes a Lover fo keen, as being kept up in the Dark.

Ab. Pray no more of your diftant Bows, your respectful Compliments —— Realy, Mr. Fantome, you're only fit to make Love a-cross a Tea-Table.

Fan. My dear Girl, I can't forbear hugging thee for thy good Advice.

Ab. Ay, now I have fome Hopes of you; but why don't you do fo to my Lady?

Fan. Child, I always thought your Lady lov'd to be treated with Respect.

Ab. Believe me, Mr. Fantome, there is not fo great a difference between Woman and Woman, as you imagine. You fee Tinfel has nothing but his Saucinefs to recommend him.

Fan. Tinfel is too great a Coxcomb to be capable of Love — And let me tell thee, Abigal, a Man, who is fincere in his Paffion, makes but a very awkard Profession of it — But I'll mend my Manners.

Ab. Ay, or you'll never gain a Widow — Come, I must tutor you a little; fuppose me to be my Lady, and let me see how you'll behave your felf.

Fan. I'm afraid, Child, we han't time for fuch a piece of Mummery.

Ab. Oh, it will be quickly over, if you play your Part well. Fan. Why then, dear Mrs. Ab- I mean my Lady Truman.

Ab. Ay ! but you han't faluted me.

Ab. That's very well-

Fan. How long must I be condemn'd to languish! when shall my Sufferings have an end! My Life! my Happines, my All is wound up in you

Ab.

Ab. Well! why don't you fqueeze my Hand?

Fan. What, thus?

Ab. Thus? Ay — Now throw your Arm about my Middle; Hug me clofer. —You are not afraid of hurting me ! Now pour forth a Volley of Rapture and Nonfenfe, till you are out of Breath.

Fan. Transport and Extafy! where am I! - my Life, my Blifs! - I rage, I burn, 1 bleed, I dye.

Ab. Go on, go on.

Fan. Flames and Darts ----- Bear me to the gloomy Shade, Rocks and Grottoes _____ Flowers, Zephyrs, and purling Streams.

Ab. Oh! Mr. Fantome, you have a Tongue wou'd undo a Vestal! You were born for the Ruin of our Sex.

-Fan. This will do then, Abigal?

Ab. Ay, this is talking like a Lover. Tho'l only reprefent my Lady, I take a Pleafure in hearing you. Well, o' my Conscience when a Man of Sense has a little Dash of the Coxcomb in him, no Woman can refift him. Go on at this rate, and the thousand Pound is as good as in my Pocket.

Fan. I shall think it an Age till I have an Opportunity of putting this Leffon in Practice.

Ab. You may do it foon, if you make good Ule of your Time; Mr. Tinsel will be here with my Lady at Eight, and at Nine the Conjurer is to take you in Hand.

Fan. Let me alone with both of them.

Ab. Well! forc-warn'd, forc-arm'd. Get into your Box, and I'll endeavour to difpose every thing in your Favour.

[Fantome goes in. Exit Abiga]. Enter Vellum.

Vel.

Vel. Mrs. Abigal is withdrawn .- I was in hopes to have heard what pass'd between her and her invisible Correspondent. Enter Tinfel

Tin. Vellum! Vellum!

Vel. [aside.] Vellum ! We are methinks very familiar; I am not us'd to be call'd fo by any but their He-nours ---- What wou'd you, Mr. Tinsel?

Tin. Let me beg a Favour of thee, old Gentleman.

Vel. What is that, good Sir?

Tin. Prithee run and fetch me the Rent-Roll of thy Lady's Estate.

Vel. The Rent-roll?

Tin. The Rent-roll? Ay, the Rent-roll! Doft not underfland what that means?

Vel. Why? have you Thoughts of purchasing of it?

Tin. Thou hast hit it, old Boy; that is my very Intention. Vel. The Purchase will be confiderable.

Tin. And for that reason I have bid thy Lady very high-She is to have no lefs for it than this entire Perfon of mine.

Vel. Is your whole Estate Personal, Mr. Finsel- he, he, he !!

Tin. Why, you queer old Dog, you don't pretend to jeft, d'ye? Look ye, Vellum, if you think of being continued my Steward, you must learn to walk with your Toes out.

Vei. [Afide.] An infolent Companion!

Tin. Thou'rt confounded rich, I fee, by that Dangling of thy Arms.

Vel. [Aside.] An ungracious Bird!

Tin. Thou shalt lend me a couple of Thousand Pounds.

Vel. [Aside.] A very Profligate!

Tin. Look ye, Vellum, I intend to be kind to you- I'll borrow fome Mony of you.

Vel. I cannot but smile to confider the Disappointment this young Fellow will meet with; I will make my felf merry with him. [Afide.] And fo, Mr. Tinfel, you promise you will be a very kind Master to me? Stifling a Laugh

Tin. What will you give for a Life in the House you live in i

Vel. What do you think of Five Hundred Pounds? ---- Ha ha, ha !

Tin. That's too little.

Vel. And yet it is more than I shall give you ---- And I wil offer you two Reasons for it.

Tin. Prithee what are they?

Vel. First, because the Tenement is not in your Disposal; and Secondly, because it never will be in your Disposal; and fo - fare you well, good Mr. Tinfel. Ha, ha, ha! You will pardor me for being jocular. Exit Vellum

Tin. This Rogue is as faucy as the Conjurer; I'll be hang'd if they are not a kin.

Ente

Enter Lady:

Lady. Mr. Tinfel! what, all alone? You Free-thinkers are great Admirers of Solitude.

Tin. No faith, I have been talking with thy Steward; a very grotelque Figure of a Fellow; the very Picture of one of our Benchers. How can you bear his Conversation?

Lady. I keep him for my Steward, and not my Companion. He's a sober Man.

Tin. Yes, yes, he looks like a Put- a queer old Dog, as eyer I faw in my Life: We must turn him off, Widow. He cheats thee confoundedly, I fee that.

Lady. Indeed you're miltaken, he has always had the Reputation of being a very honeft Man.

Tin. What? I suppose he goes to Church.

Lady. Goes to Church! fo do you too, I hope.

Tin. I wou'd for once, Widow, to make fure of you. Lady. Ah, Mr. Tinsel, a Husband who would not continue to go thither, wou'd quickly forget the Promises he made there.

Tin. Faith very innocent and very ridiculous ! Well then. I warrant thee, Widow, thou wou'dst not for the World marry a Sabbath-breaker!

Lady. Truly they generally come to a bad End. I remember the Conjurer told you, you were short-liv'd.

Tin. The Conjurer! Ha, ha, ha!

Lady. Indeed you're very wirry!

Tin, Indeed you're very handfome. Kiffes her Hand. Lady. I with the Fool does not love me! · [Afide.

Tin. Thou art the Idol I adore. Here must I pay my Devotion-Prithee, Widow, haft thou any Timber upon thy Eftate?

Lady. The most impudent Fellow I ever met with. [Aside.

Tin. I take Notice thou haft a great deal of old Plate here in the House, Widow.

Lady. Mr. Tinsel, you are a very observing Man.

Tin. Thy large Silver Ciftern would make a very good Coach, and half a Dozen Salvers that I faw on the Side-board, might be turn'd into fix as pretty Horfes as any that appear in the Ring.-

Lady. You have a very good Fancy, Mr. Tinfel --- What pretty Transformations you could make in my Houfe-But I'll fee where 'twill end. Afide.

Tin.

The Haunted House.

4I

Tin.

Tin. Then I obferve, Child, you have two or three Services of gilt Plate; we'd eat always in China, my Dear.

Lady. I perceive you are an excellent Manager — How quickly you have taken an Inventory of my Goods!

Tin. Now hark ye, Widow, to show you the Love that I have for you—

Lady. Very well, let me hear.

Tin. You have an old-fashion'd Gold Caudle Cup, with the Figure of a Saint upon the Lid on't.

Lady. I have, what then?

Tin. Why look ye, I'd fell the Caudle-Cup with the old Saint for as much Money as they'd fetch, which I wou'd convert into a Diamond Buckle, and make you a Prefent of it.

Lady. Oh you are generous to an Extravagance. But pray, Mr. Timfel, don't dispose of my Goods before you are sure of my Person. I find you have taken a great Affection to my Moveables.

Tin. My Dear, I love every thing that belongs to you.

Lady I fee you do, Sir, you need not make any Protestations upon that Subject.

Tin. Pho, pho, my Dear, we are growing Serious; and, let me tell you, that's the very next Step to being Dull. Come, that pretty Face was never made to look grave with.

Lady. Believe me, Sir, whatever you may think, Marriage is a ferious Subject.

• Tin. For that very Reason, my Dear, let us get over it as fast as we can.

Lady. I should be very much in haste for a Husband, if I married within source Months after Sir George's Decease.

Tin. Pray, my Dear, let me ask you a Queffion; Do'ft not thou think that Sir George is as dead at prefent, to all Intents and Purpofes, as he will be a Twelve-month hence?

Lady. Yes, but Decency ! Mr. Tinfel-

Tin. Or do'ft thou think thou'lt be more a Widow then, than thou art now?

Lady. The World would fay I never lov'd my First Husband.

Tin. Ah, my Dear, they wou'd fay you lov'd your Second, and they wou'd own I deferv'd it, for I shall love thee most inordinately.

Lady. But what wou'd People think?

The Drummer; Or,

42

Tin. Think ! why they wou'd think thee the Mirrour of Widowhood. — That a Woman shou'd live fourteen whole Months after the Decease of her Spoule, without having engaged herself. Why, about Town, we know many a Woman of Quality's Second Husband several Years before the Death of the First.

Lady. Ay, I know you Wits have your common place Jefts upon us poor Widows.

Tin. I'll tell you a Story, Widow; I know a certain Lady, who confidering the Crazinefs of her Husband, had, in cafe of Mortality, engaged her felf to two young Fellows of my Acquaintance. They grew fuch desperate Rivals for her, while her Husband was alive, that one of them pink'd the t'other in a Duel. But the good Lady was no fooner a Widow, but what did my Dowager do? Why faith, being a Woman of Honour, she married a Third, to whom, it seems, she had given her first Promise.

Lady. And this is a true Story upon your own Knowledge?

Tin. Every Tittle, as I hope to be marry'd, or never believe Tom Tinsel.

Lady. Pray, Mr. Tinsel, do you call this talking like a Wit, or like a Rake?

Tin. Innocent enough, he, he, he! Why! where's the Difference, my Dear?

Lady. Yes, Mr. Tinsel, the only Man I ever lov'd in my Life, had a great deal of the one, and nothing of the other in. him.

Tin. Nay now you grow vapourish; thou'lt begin to fancy thou hear's the Drum by and by.

Lady. If you had been here last Night about this time, you. would not have been fo merry.

Tin. About this time, fay'ft thou? Come faith, for the Humour's fake, we'll fit down and liften.

Lady. I will, if you'll promife to be ferious.

Tin. Serious! never fear me, Child. Ha, ha, ha! Do'ft not hear him?

Lady. You break your World already. Pray, Mr. Tinfel, do you laugh to show your Wit or your Teeth?

Tin. Why, both! my Dear. — I'm glad, however, that fhe has taken notice of my Teeth. [Afide.] But you look ferious, Child, I fancy thou hear'ft the Drum, do'ft not?

- Lady:

Lady. Don't talk fo rashly?

Tin. Why, my Dear, you cou'd not look more frighted if you had Lucifer's Drum-Major in your Houfe.

Lady. Mr. Tinfel, I must defire to fee you no more in it, if you do not leave this idle way of Talking.

Tin. Child, I thought I had told you what is my Opinion of Spirits, as we were drinking a difh of Tea but just now. There is no fuch thing I give thee my Word.

Lady. Oh, Mr. Tin/el, your Authority must be of great weight to those that know you.

Tin. For my part, Child, I have made my felf eafy in those Points.

Lady. Sure nothing was ever like this Fellow's Vanity, but his Ande. Ignorance.

Tin. I'll tell thee what now, Widow ---- I wou'd engage by the help of a white Sheet and a penny-worth of Link in a dark Night, to frighten you a whole Country Village out of their Sences, and the Vicar into the bargain. [Drum beats.] Hark ! hark ! what Noife is that! Heaven defend us! this is more than Fancy.

Lady. It beats more terrible than ever.

Tin. 'Tis very dreadful! What a Dog have I been to fpeak againft my Confcience, only to fhow my Parts!

Lady. It comes nearer and nearer. I wilh you have not anger'd it by your foolish Discourse.

Tin. Indeed, Madam, I did not fpeak from my Heart; I hope it will do me no hurt, for a little harmlefs Raillery.

Lady. Harmlefs, d'ye call it? it beats hard by us, as if it wou'd break through the Wall.

Tin. What a Devil had I to do with a white Sheet?

[Scene opens, and discovers Fantome'

Tin. Mercy on us! it appears.

Lady. Oh! 'tis he! 'tis he himfelf, 'tis Sir George! 'tis my Husband. She faints.

Tin. Now wou'd I give Ten Thousand Pound that I were in [Fantome advances to him Drumming. Town.

Tin. I beg Ten Thousand Pardons. I'll never talk at this rate any more. Fantome still advances Drumming.

Tin. By my Soul, Sir George, I was not in earnest [falls on his knees] have Compassion on my Youth, and confider I am but a Coxcomb - [Fantome points to the Door.] But fee he G a waves

waves meeff ay with all my Heart What a Devil had I to do with a white Sheet? [He fleals off the Stage, mending his Pace as the Drum beats.

Fan. The Scoundrel is gone, and has left his Miftrefs behind him. I'm miftaken if he makes Love in this Houfe any more. I have now only the Conjurer to deal with. I don't queftion but I fhall make his Reverence fcamper as faft as the Lover. And then the Day's my own. But the Servants are coming. I muft get into my Cup-board.

Enter Abigal and Servants.

Ab. Oh my poor Lady! This wicked Drum has frighted Mr. Tinfel out of his Wits, and my Lady into a Swoon. Let me bend her a little forward. She revives. Here, carry her into the frefh Air and fhe'll recover. [They carry her off.] This is a little barbarous to my Lady, but 'tis all for her Good: and I know her fo well, that the wou'd not be angry with me, if the knew what I was to get by it. And if any of her Friends thou'd blame me for it hereafter,

I'll clap my Hand upon my Purse, and tell 'em, 'Twas for a thousand Pound and Mr. Vellum.

ACT

ACT V. SCENE I.

Enter Sir George, in his Conjurer's Habit, the Butler marching before him with two large Candles, and the two Servants coming after him, one bringing a little Table, and another a Chair.

Butler. A N't pleafe your Worship, Mr. Conjurer, the Steward has given all of us Orders to do whatsoever you shall bid us, and to pay you the fame Respect, as if you were our Master.

Sir G. Thou fay'ft well.

Gard. An't please your Conjurership's Worship, shall I fet the Table down here?

Sir G. Here, Peter.

Gard. Peter! — He knows my Name by his Learning. [Afide. Coach. I have brought you, Reverend Sir, the largeft Elbow Chair in the Houfe; 'tis that the Steward fits in when he holds a Court.

Sir G: Place it there.

But. Sir, will you pleafe to want any thing elfe?

Sir G. Paper, and a Pen and Iok.

But. Sir, I believe we have Paper that is fit for your Purpofe! My Lady's mourning Paper, that is black'd at the Edger-Wou'd you chufe to write with a Crow Quill?

Sir G. There is none better.

But. Coachman, go fetch the Paper and Standish out of the little Parlour.

Coach. [To Gard.] Peter, prithee do thou go along with me —— I'm afraid —— You know I went with you last Night into the Garden, when the Cook-Maid wanted a handful of Parsley.

But. Why, you don't think I'll flay with the Conjurer by my felf!

Gard. Come, we'll all three go and fetch the Pen and Inlitogether.

Si

Sir G. folus. There's nothing, I fee, makes fuch firong Alliances as Fear. These Fellows are all enter'd into a Confedetacy against the Ghost. There must be abundance of Business done in the Family at this rate. But here comes the Triple-Alliance. Who cou'd have thought these three Rogues cou'd have found each of 'em an Employment in fetching a Pen and Ink !

Enter Gardiner with a Sheet of Paper, Coachman with a Standifb, and Butler with a Pen.

Gard. Sir, there is your Paper.

Coach. Sir, there is your Standifh.

But. Sir, there is your Crow-quill Pen— I'm glad I have got rid on't.

Gard. [Afide.] He forgets that he's to make a Circle-----Doctor, thail I help you to a Bit of Chalk?

Sir G. It is no matter.

Sir. G. We shall try.

Gard. That's right, John. His Worship must let fly all his Learning at that old Wall.

But. Sir, if I was worthy to advife you, I wou'd have a Bottle of good October by me. Shall I fet a Cup of old Stingo at your Elbow?

Sir G. I thank thee— we shall do without it.

Gard. John, he seems a very good-natur'd Man for a Conjurer.

But. I'll take this Opportunity of enquiring after a Bit of Plate I have loft. I fancy, whilft he is in my Lady's Pay, one may hedge in a Queftion or two into the Bargain. Sir, Sir, may I beg a word in your Ear?

Sir G. What would ft thou?

But. Sir, I know I need not tell you, that I loft one of my Silver Spoons laft Week.

Sir G. Mark'd with a Swan's Neck-

But. My Lady's Creft! He knows every thing. [Afide.] How wou'd your Worship advise me to recover it again? Sir G. Hum!

But.

The Haunted House.

But. What must I do to come at it? Sir G. Drink nothing but Small Beer for a Fortnight— But. Small Beer ! Rot-gut!

Sir G. If thou drink'ft a fingle Drop of Ale before fifteen Days are expir'd—— it is as much—— as thy Spoon—— is worth.

But. I shall never recover it that way; I'll e'en buy a new one.

Coach. D'ye mind how they whilper?

Gard. I'll be hang'd if he be not asking him fomething about Nell-

Coach. I'll take this Opportunity of putting a Question to him about poor Dobbing: I fancy he cou'd give me better Council than the Farrier.

But. [to Gard.] A prodigious Man! he knows every thing: Now is the time to find out thy Pick-ax.

Gard. I have nothing to give him: Does not he expect to have his Hand crofs'd with Silver?

Coach [to Sir G.] Sir, may a Man venture to ask you a Question? Sir G. Ask it.

Coach. I have a poor Horfe in the Stable that's bewitch'd — Sir G. A bay Gelding.

Coach. How cou'd he know that? _____ [Aside.

Sir G. Bought at Banbury.

Coach. Whew —— fo it was o' my Conficience. [Whiftles. Sir G. Six Year old last Lammas.

Coach. To a Day [Afide.] Now, Sir, I wou'd know whether the poor Beaft is bewitch'd by Goody Crouch or Goody Flye?

Sir G. Neither.

Coach. Then it must be Goody Gurton! for she is the next oldest Woman in the Parish.

Gard. Ha'st thou done, Robin ?

Coach. [to Gard.] He can tell thee any thing.

Gard. [to Sir G.] Sir, I wou'd beg to take you a little further out of hearing-

Sir G. Speak

Gard. The Butler and I, Mr. Doctor, were both of us in Love at the fame time with a certain Person.

Gardi-

Sir G. A Woman.

The Drummer; Or,

Gard. How cou'd he know that !

Sir G. Go on:

Gard. This Woman has lately had two Children at a Birth. Sur G. Twins.

Gard. Prodigious! where could he hear that?

Sir G. Proceed.

Gard. Now, because I us'd to meet her sometimes in the Garden, she has laid them both —

Sir G. To Thee. Appendice of the offer of the States States

Gard. What a Power of Learning he must have! he knows every thing.

Sir G. Ha'st thou done?

Gard. I wou'd defire to know whether I am really Father to them both?

Sir G. Stand before me, let me survey thee round.

[Lays his Wand upon his Head, and makes him turn about.] Coach. Look yonder, John, the filly Dog is turning about under the Conjurce's Wand. If he has been faucy to him, we fhall fee him puff'd off in a Whirlwind immediately.

Sir G. Twins, do'ft thou fay? . [Still turning him.] Gard. Ay, are they both mine d'ye think?

Sir G. Own but one of them.

Gard. Ah, but Mrs. Abigal will have me take care of them both —— fhe's always for the Butler —— If my poor Mafter Sir George had been alive, he wou'd have made him go Halves with me.

Sir G. What, was Sir George a kind Mafter?

Gard. Was he! Ay, my Fellow-Servants will bear me Witnels.

Sir G. Did ye love Sir George?

But. Every Body lov'd him -----

Coach. There was not a dry Eye in the Parish at the News of his Death —

Gard. He was the best Neighbour ----

But. The kindeft Husband

Coach. The trueft Friend to the Poor

But. My good Lady took on mightily, we all thought it wou'd have been the Death of her —

[Afide.

Afrae,

Sir G. I proteft thefe Fellows melt me! I think the time long till I am their Mafter again, that I may be kind to them. [Afide.

Enter Vellum.

[Exeunt Servants. Sir G. I can as yet fee no hurt in my Wife's Behaviour; but ftill have fome certain Pangs and Doubts, that are natural to the Heart of a fond Man. I must take the Advantage of my Difguife to be thoroughly fatisfied. It wou'd neither be for her Happinels, nor mine, to make my felf known to her till I am fo [Afide.] Dear Vellum! I am impatient to hear fome News of my Wife, how does the after her Fright?

Vel. It is a Saying fomewhere in my Lord Coke, that a Widow _____

Sir G. I ask of my Wife, and thou talk'ft to me of my Lord Coke———prithee tell me how she does, for I am in Pain for her.

Vel. She is pretty well recover'd Mrs. Abigal has put her in good Heart; and I have given her great hopes from your Skill.

Sir G. That I think cannot fail, fince thou haft got this Secret out of Abigal! But I could not have thought my Friend Fantome would have ferved me thus—

Vel. You will still fancy you are a living Man-

Sir G. That he shou'd endeavour to Ensnare my Wife-

Vel. You have no Right in her, after your Demise Death extinguishes all Property, — Quoad banc — It is a Maxim in the Law.

Sir G. A Pox on your Learning! Well, but what is become of Tinfel?

Vel. He rush'd out of the House, call'd for his Horse, clap'd Spurs to his sides, and was out of sight in less time, than I—can—tell—ten.

Sw G.

H

Sir G. This is Whimfical enough ! my Wife will have 2 quick Succeffion of Lovers, in one Day—Fantome has driven out Tinfel, and I shall drive out Fantome.

Vel. Ev'n as one Wedge driveth out another — he, he, he! you must pardon me for being Jocular.

Sir G. Was there ever fuch a provoking Blockhead! but he means me well. — Well! I must have Satisfaction of this Traitour Fantome; and cannot take a more proper one, than by turning him out of my House, in a manner that shall throw Shame upon him, and make him ridiculous as long as he lives. — You must remember, Vellam, you have abundance of Business upon your Hands, and I have but just time to tell it you over, all I require of you is Dispatch, therefore hear me.

Vel. There is nothing more requisite in Business than Dispatch-

Sir. G. Then hear me.

Vel. It is indeed the Life of Business

Sir G. Hear Me then, I fay.

Vel. And as one has rightly observed, the Benefit that attends it is four-fold. First-

Sir G. There is no bearing this! Thou art-a going to defcribe Difpatch, when thou should ft be practifing it.

Vel. But your Ho-nour will not give me the hear-

Sir G. Thou wilt not give me the hearing. [Angrily.]

Vel. I am ftill.

Sir G. In the First place, you are to lay my Wigg, Hat, and Sword ready for me in the Closet, and one of my Scarlet Coats. You know how Abigal has defcribed the Ghost to you.

Vel. It shall be done.

Sir G. Then you must remember, whilst I am laying this Ghost, you are to prepare my Wife for the Reception of her real Husband; tell her the whole Story, and do it with all the Art you are Master of, that the Surprise may not be too great for her.

Vel

The Haunted House.

SI

Sir

Vel. It shall be done-But since her Ho-nour has seen this Apparition, she defires to see you once more, before you encounter it.

Sir G. I shall expect her impatiently. For now I can talk to her without being interrupted by that impertinent Rogue Tinfel. I hope thou hast not told Abigal any thing of the Secret.

Vel. Mrs. Abigal is a Woman; there are many Reafons why fhe fhou'd not be acquainted with it: I fhall only mention Six_____

Sir G. Hush, here she comes! Oh my Heart!

Enter Lady and Abigal.

Sir G. [Afide, while Vellum talks in dumb Show to Lady.] O that lov'd Woman! How I long to take her in my Arms! If I find I am ftill Dear to her Memory, it will be a return to Life indeed! But I must take care of indulging this Tendernefs, and put on a Behaviour more fuitable to my prefent Character.

[Walks at a distance in a pensive Posture, waving bis Wand.

Lady. [to Vellum.] This is furprizing indeed! So all the Servants tell me; They fay he knows every thing that has happen'd in the Family.

Ab. [Afide.] A parcel of credulous Fools! They first tell him their Secrets, and then wonder how he comes to know them.

> [Exit Vellum, exchanging fond Looks with Abigal.

Lady. Learned Sir, may I have fome Conversation with you, before you begin your Ceremonies?

Sir G. Speak! But hold — first let me feel your Pulse?

Lady. What can you learn from that?

Sir G. I have already learn'd a Secret from it, that will aftonish you.

Lady. Pray, what is it?

Sir G. You will have a Husband within this half Hour.

Ab. [Afide.] I'm glad to hear that —— He must mean Mr. Fantome; I begin to think there's a good deal of Truth in his Art.

Lady. Alas! I fear you mean I shall fee Sir George's Apparition a fecond time. The Drummer; Ur,

Sir G. Have Courage, you shall see the Apparition no more. The Husband I mention shall be as much alive as I am.

Ab. Mr. Fantome to be sure.

[Afide.

Lady. Impoffible! I lov'd my first too well.

SirG. You cou'd not love the first better than you will love the fecond.

Ab. [Afide.] I'll be hang'd if my dear Steward has not inflructed him; he means Mr. Fantome to be fure; the Thoufand Pound is our own!

Lady. Alas! you did not know Sir George.

Sir G. As well as I do my felf —— I faw him with you in the red Damask Room, when he firft made Love to you; your Mother left you together, under Pretence of receiving a Vifit from Mrs. Hawthorn, on her Return from London.

Lady. This is aftonishing!

Sir G. You were a great Admirer of a fingle Life for the first half Hour; your Refufals then grew still fainter and fainter. With what Extafy did Sir George kifs your Hand, when you told him you shou'd always follow the Advice of your Mamma!

Lady. Every Circumffance to a Tittle!

Sir G. Then, Lady ! the Wedding Night ! I faw you in your white Sattin Night-gown; you wou'd not come out of your Dreffing-Room, till Sir George took you out by Force. He drew you gently by the Hand — You ftruggled — but he was too ftrong for you — You blufh'd, He Lady. Oh! ftop there! go no farther! —— He knows every thing. [Afide.

Ab. Truly, Mr. Conjurer, I believe you have been a Wagg in your Youth.

Sir G. Mrs. Abigal, you know what your good Word coft Sir George, a Purse of Broad Pieces, Mrs. Abigal

Ab. The Devil's in him. [Afide.] Pray, Sir, fince you have told fo far, you should tell my Lady that I refus'd to take them.

Sir G. 'Tis true, Child, he was forc'd to thrust them into your Bosome.

Ab. This Rogue will mention the Thousand Pound, if I don't

Lady. Sir, fince I have now no Reafon to doubt of your Art, I muft befeech you to treat this Apparition gently —— It has the refemblance of my deceas'd Husband, if there be any undifcover'd Secret, any thing that troubles his Reft, learn it of him.

Sir G. I must to that End be fincerely informed by you, whether your Heart be engaged to another; Have not you receiv'd the Addreffes of many Lovers fince his Death?

Lady. I have been oblig'd to receive more Visits, than have been agreeable.

Sir G. Was not Tinfel welcome? —— I'm afraid to hear an Anfwer to my own Queftion. [Afide.

Lady. He was well recommended.

Sir G. Racks!

Lidy. Of a good Family.

Sir G. Tortures!

Lady. Heir to a confiderable Effate!

Sir G. Death! [Aside] And you still love him? — I'm Distracted! [Aside]

Lady. No, I defpife him. I found he had a defign upon my Fortune, was Bafe, Profligate, Cowardly, and ev'ry thing that cou'd be expected from a Man of the vileft Principles!-----

Sir G. I'm Recover'd.

To Town, Child, fays he: For to tell thee truly, Child, fays he, I don't care for living under the fame Roof with the Devil, fays he.

Sir G. Well, Lady, I fee nothing in all this, that may hinder Sir George's Spirit from being at Reft.

La. If he knows any thing of what paffesin my Heart, he cannot but be fatisfy'd of that Fondnefs which I bear to his Memory. My Sorrow for him is always fresh when I think of him. He was the kindeft, trueft, tenderest — Tears will not let me go Abig. I with Mr. Fantome gets well off from this old Don I know he'll be with him immediately.

> [Encunt Lady and Abigal. Sir George Solus.

Sir G. My Heart is now at Eafe, the is the fame dear Woman I left her — Now for my Revenge upon Fantome. — I thall cut the Ceremonies thort — A few Words will do his Bulineft. Now let me feat my felf in form — A good eafy Chair for a Conjurer this! — Now for a few Mathematical Scratches a good lucky Scrawl, that — faith I think it looks very Aftrological — Thefe two or three magical Pot-hooks about it, make it a compleat Conjurer's Scheme. [Drum beats] Ha, ha, ha, Sir, are you there? Enter Drummer. Now muft I pore upon my Paper.

Enter Fantome, beating his Drum. Sir G. Prithee don't make a Noife, I'm bufy. [Fantome beats.] Sir G. A pretty March! prithee beat that over again.

[He beats and advances. Sir G. [Rifing] Ha! you're very perfect in the Step of a Ghoft. You ftalk it Majeffically. [Fantome advances.

Sir G. How the Rogue stares, he acts it to Admiration; I'll be hang'd if he has not been practifing this half hour in Mrs. Abigal's Wardrobe. [Fantome starts, gives a

Sir G. Prithee don't play the Fool! [Fantome beats. Sir G. Nay, nay, enough of this good Mr. Fantome.

Fan. [Afide.] Death! I'm discover'd. This Jade Abigal has betray'd me.

Str G. Mr. Fantome, upon the Word of an Aftrologer, your Thousand Pound Bribe will never gain my Lady Truman.

Fan. 'Tis plain, She has told him all.

Sir G. Let me advife you to make off as fast as you can, or I plainly perceive by my Art, Mr. Ghost will have his Bones broke.

Fan. [to Sir G.] Look'ye, Old Gentleman, I perceive you have learnt this Secret from Mrs. Abigal.

Sir

Sir G. I have learn'd it from my Art.

Fun. Thy Art ! prithee no more of that. Look ye, I know. you are a Cheat as much as I am. And if thou'lt keep my Counfel, Ill give thee ten Broad Pieces.

Sir G. I am not Mercenary! Young Man, I fcorn thy Gold. Fan. I'll make them up Twenty.

Sir. G. Avaunt! and that quickly, or I'll raife fuch an Apparition, as shall-

Fan. An Apparition, Old Gentleman! you mistake your Man, I am not to be frighten'd with Bugbears.

Sir G. Let me retire but for a few Moments, and I will give thee fuch a Proof of my Art ——

Far. Why, if thou haft any Hocus-pocus Tricks to play, why canft not do them here?

Sir G. The raifing of a Spirit, requires certain Secret Mysteries to be performed, and Words to be mutter'd in private.

Fan. Well, if I fee through your Trick, will you promife to be my Friend.

Sir G. I will — attend and tremble.

Fantome Solus.

Fan. A very folemn old Afs! But I fmoak him, — he has a mind to raife his Price upon me. I cou'd not think this Slut wou'd have us'd me thus. — I begin to grow horribly tir'd of my Drum, I wifh I was well rid of it. However I have got this by it, that it has driven off Tinfel for good and all; I fhan't have the Mortification to fee my Miftrefs carry'd off by fuch a Rival. Well, whatever happens, I muft frop this Old Fellow's Mouth, I muft not be fparing in Hufh-Money. But here he comes.

Enter Sir George in his own Habit.

Fan. Ha! what's that! Sir George Truman! This can be no Counterfeir. His Drefs! his Shape! his Face! the very Wound of which he dy'd! Nay, then 'tis time to decamp! [Rans off.]

SirG. Ha, ha, ha! Fare you well, good Sir George — The Enemy has left me Mafter of the Field: Here are the Marks of my Victory. This Drum will I hang up in my great Hall as the Trophy of the Day.

Enter Abigak

Sir George stands with his Hand before his Face in a musing Posture.

Ab. Yonder he is. O' my Confcience he has driven off the Conjurer. Mr. Fantome, Mr. Fantome ! I give you Joy, I give you Joy, What do you think of your Thoufand Pounds now? Why does not the Man speak?

[Pulls him by the Sleeve. Sir G. Ha! Ab. Oh! 'tis my Mafter! [Running away he catches her.

Sir G. Good Mrs. Abigal not fo fast.

Ab. Are you alive, Sir? He has given my Shoulder fuch a curfed Tweak! they must be real Fingers. I feel 'em I'm fure. Sir G. What do'st think?

Ab. Think, Sir? Think? Troth I don't know what to think. Pray, Sir, how-

Sir G. No Queftions, good Abigal. Thy Curiofity shall be fatisfied in due time. Where's your Lady?

Ab. Oh, I'm fo frighted --- and fo glad !----

Sir G. Where's your Lady, I ask you-

Ab. Marry I don't know where I am my felf---- I can't forbear weeping for Joy----

Sir G. Your Lady! I fay your Lady! I must bring you to your felf with one Pinch more —

Ab. Oh! fhe has been talking a good while with the Steward.

Sir G. Then he has open'd the whole Story to her, I'm glad he has prepar'd her. Oh! here the comes.

Enter Lady follow'd by Vellum.

Lady. Where is he? let me fly into his Arms! my Life! my -Soul! my Husband!

Sir G. Oh! let me catch thee to my Heart, dearest of Women!

Lady. Are you then still alive, and are you here! I can fcarce believe my Senses! Now am I happy indeed!

Sir G. My Heart is too full to answer thee.

Lady. How could you be fo cruel to defer giving me that Joy which you knew I must receive from your Prefence? You have robb'd my Life of fome Hours of Happiness that ought to have been in it.

Sir G. It was to make our Happines the more fincere and unmixt. There will be now no Doubts to dash it. What has been the Affliction of our Lives, has given a Variety to them, and will hereaster supply us with a thousand Materials to talk of.

Lady. I am now fatisfy'd that it is not in the Power of Abfence to leffen your Love towards me.

Sir G. And I am fatisfy'd that it is not in the Power of Death to deftroy that Love which makes me the happiest of Men.

Lady. Was ever Woman fo bleft ! to find again the Darling of her Soul, when the thought him loft for ever! to enter into a kind of fecond Marriage with the only Man whom the was ever capable of loving!

Sir G. May it be as happy as our first, I defire no more! Believe me, my Dear, I want Words to express those Transports of Joy and Tenderness which are every Moment rising in my Heart whils I speak to thee.

Enter Servants.

But. Just as the Steward told us, Lads! Look you there, if he ben't with my Lady already?

Gard. He! he! he! what a joyful Night will this be for Madam!

Coach. As I was coming in at the Gate, a ftrange Gentleman whisk'd by me; but he took to his Heels, and made away to the George. If I did not fee Mafter before me, I shou'd have fworn it had been his Honour!

Gard. Ha'ft given Orders for the Bells to be fet a ringing?

Coach. Never trouble thy Head about that, 'tis done.

Sir G. [to Lady.] My Dear, I long as much to tell you my whole Story, as you do to hear it. In the mean while, I am to look upon this as my Wedding Day. I'll have nothing but the Voice of Mirth and Feafting in my Houfe. My poor Neighbours and my Servants shall rejoyce with me. My Hall shall be free to every one, and let my Cellars be thrown open.

But. Ah! bles your Honour, may you never die again! Coach. The fame good Man that ever he was!

Gard.

The Drummer, &cc.

Gard. Whurra!

Sir G. Vellum, thou haft done me much Service to Day. I know thou lov'ft Abigal, but fhe's difappointed in a Fortune. I'll make it up to both of you. I'll give thee a Thoufand Pound with her. It is not fit there fhou'd be one fad Heart in my Houfe to Night.

Lady. What you do for Abigal, I know is meant as a Compliment to me. This is a new Inftance of your Love.

Ab. Mr. Vellum, you are a well-spoken Man : Pray do you thank my Master and my Lady.

Sir G. Vellum, I hope you are not displeas'd with the Gift I make you.

Vel. The Gift is Twofold. I receive from you A virtuous Partner, and a Portion too; For which, in humble wife, I thank the Donors: And fo we bid Good-night to both your Ho--nours.

EPILOGUE.

O Night, the Poet's Advocate I stand, And he deferves the Favour at my hand, Who in my Equipage their Cause debating Has plac'd two Lovers, and a third in waiting; If both the first shou'd from their Duty swerve, There's one behind the Wainscote in referve. In his next Play, if I wou'd take this Trouble, He promis'd me to make the Number double: In troth' twas spoke like an obliging Creature, For tho' 'tis Simple, yet it shews Good nature.

My Help thus ask'd, I cou'd not chuse but grant it, And really I thought the Play wou'd want it, Void as it is of all the usual Arts To warm your Fancies, and to steal your Hearts: No Court-Intrigue, nor City-Cuckoldom, No Song, no Dance, no Musick—but a Drum— No smutty Thought in doubtful Phrase express; And, Gentlemen, if so, pray where's the Jest? When we wou'd raise your Mirth, you hardly know, Whether in strictness you shou'd Laugh or no, But turn upon the Ladies in the Pit, And if they redden, you are sure 'tis Wit.

Protect him then, ye Fair ones; for the Fair Of all Conditions are his equal Care. He draws a Widow, who of blameless Carriage True to her Jointure, hates a second Marriage;

And.

E P I L O G U E.

And, to improve a virtuous Wife's Delights, Out of one Man contrives two Wedding Nights, Nay, to oblige the Sex in every State, A Nymph of five and forty finds her Mate.

Too long has Marriage, in this taftlefs Age, With ill-bred Raillery fupply'd the Stage; No little Scribler is of Wit fo bare, But has his fling at the poor Wedded Pair; Our Author deals not in Conceits fo fiale: For shou'd th' Examples of his Play prevail, No Man need blush, tho' true to Marriage-Vows, Nor be a Jest tho' he shou'd love his Spouse. Thus has he done you British Conforts right, Whose Husbands, shou'd they pry life mine to Night. Wou'd never find you in your Schulet Slipping, The' they turn'd Conjurers is take you Tripping.
